HONDURAS IN GRIP OF REVOLT

SPAIN ACCUSES FALLEN KING OF BEING GRAFTER

Republic Ready to Prosecute Him.

[Copyright, 1931, by The New York Times.]

LONDON, April 19.—King Alfonso will arrive in London tomorrow night from Paris, accompanied by the duke of Miranda, according to the Daily Mail. Alfonso, the Mail says, will travel by train and yacht. It is understood his visit will be in connection with the disposal of his estate.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, April 19.—The strong possibility that Alfonso will be tried by the Spanish republican government, as previously forecast, was announced today. Angel Ossorio, government prosecutor. He did not say when, but made it plain that he former king is about to be named chief culprit in a wholesale "inquest" into the rule of the monarchy since 1921.

MAJ. RAMON FRANCO. [Acme Photo.]

"We will destroy Alfonso morally and politically and perhaps more so than the Russians did the late czar physically," a member of the government declared. "We will show that he have been a regular pickpocket."

Queen Insists Jewels Are Hers.

Queen Victoria, through the Paris embassy, is reported to have answered protests by the police for the return of certain jewels, believed to be the property of the nation which she is supposed to have carried away with her claim that all royal jewels were the king's. Government officials, however, declare they are not worried, as Alfonso has enough personal property in Spain which could be held against their return.

Alejandro Lerroux, foreign minister, stated privately on the eve of the revolution:

"What if he does carry them off? They will be the last of Spain's gifts through the centuries to her monarchs. We are lucky to get off so easily and so soon."

France in Hot Water.

Maj. Ramon Franco, trans-Atlantic flyer, back from exile in Paris only ten days, is already in hot water with the republicans. Upon his refusal to quit as aviation director with a certain undersecretary of war whom he accused of having been monarchist, the republic reprimanded him. He is reported to have attempted to arouse the airmen to hostile demonstrations.

This has given rise to the scare that another revolt might break out at the Four Winds airport near Madrid. Civil guards were rushed there last night, but found everybody asleep.

Maj. Franco in a conversation with friends expressed the opinion that the people should be armed for a real revolution.

"Against whom?" he was asked.

Infanta Leaves on Stretcher.

Weeping silently on the stretcher that may be her death bed, the last member of Spanish royalty took the road to exile tonight. She is Donna Isabel, aged 82, infanta of Spain, Alfonso's aunt and beloved by the nation as no other Bourbon.

"La Chata"—pug-nosed—they called her, and whenever, during the last few days, when mobs surging through the streets crying "Death to the king!" called for the heads of Gen. Damaso Berenguer, former premier, and Count Romanones, passed the palace where she lay seriously ill, they stopped and shouted, "Viva la Chata."

Now, she knows, she cannot avoid, by dying in republican Spain she will. The provisional government sent her a tender note saying she must stay forever. But she would not, although her doctors warned that she might not live to cross the frontier.

Will Go to Paris.

CITY JUBILEE DRAWS WORLD VISITORS HERE

CHICAGO JUBILEE.

The Chicago Tribune Service Bureau, No. 1 South Dearborn street, telephone Superior 0100, will supply all information to those planning to participate in the Chicago Jubilee May 11.

Telephone calls swamped THE TRIBUNE public service offices yesterday and last night in a rush of business men, industrial associations, and civic organizations to participate in the great Chicago Jubilee which will be held in the downtown district beginning May 11.

In addition there were scores of others who called in person, enthusiastic over the Chicago Jubilee. Plans for the Chicago Jubilee are available at THE TRIBUNE public service office at 1 South Dearborn street or by telephone to Superior 0100.

Randolph Tells of Response.

"The response is terrific," commented Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, last night. His association is unanimously behind the project.

"Our representative leaders, our commercial chiefs, and others who have the city's welfare at heart, are for the Chicago Jubilee," Col. Randolph said. "Not only that, but the people themselves, who will make the event a success, have evinced cooperative interest.

"The Chicago Jubilee is the name officially agreed upon for the celebration. It will be something memorable in our life. It will contribute much to portraying our city's true self."

Announced in The Tribune.

A complete announcement of the Chicago Jubilee was contained in yesterday's SUNDAY TRIBUNE. The theme of the celebration, which is expected to color the city's downtown district with a festival aura, is a revived spirit, commercially, politically and morally. A big parade will feature the inauguration, Monday night, May 11, in which the city's major industries and commercial organizations will participate.

Effectual preliminary contributions to the Chicago Jubilee are already under way. Chicago Products week is now being held. Cleanup week, sponsored by the Association of Commerce, will begin today. On May 20 will be staged a spectacular air battle over Lake Michigan, off Navy pier. Hundreds of fighting planes will be seen in mimic battle.

Merchants Pledge Support.

Announcement of the Chicago Jubilee was preceded by pledges of cooperation and support of loop stores and other interests having prominent shares in the city's well being. There was an immediate response to the plan.

Forty-six nations will probably share in some way in the Chicago Jubilee. It was indicated last night. Invitations have been extended to governmental or other representatives of these nations.

Most of the foreign representatives will be in Washington to attend the International Chamber of Commerce convention from May 4 to May 9. The Chicago representative at the meeting will be Silas H. Strawn, attorney. Mr. Strawn has assumed charge of inviting the foreign delegates to Chicago. They will be requested to extend their stay in America and attend the Chicago Jubilee.

Cermak Backs Jubilee.

The Chicago Jubilee at the outset received the approval of Mayor Anton J. Cermak.

"The Jubilee is a natural event," he said in Miami, Fla., where he is resting. "I probably shall name a special welcoming committee to greet the many distinguished visitors who will come to Chicago during the Jubilee."

Heads of State street and other loop stores who will join in the movement last night repeated assurances that they would actively help to make the jubilee a momentous occasion.

"The Chicago Jubilee will be a great thing for the city," said D. F. Kelly, president of The Fair. "It is what is needed, a revival of the spirit that is really ours. I hope the Chicago Jubilee will attract many visitors from elsewhere. Our people know Chicago, and we want others to know it, to get a real picture of Chicago as Chicago is."

Praise from D. M. Yates.

"Let's put a shining face on Chicago and show it to the world with the Chicago Jubilee," said D. M. Yates of Marshall Field & Co. "It is a fine undertaking, and I agree with

SAM NOW HAS THREE HOLES IN HIS BEST PANTS

Frank Nemicek, 30 years old, 725 West 27th street, invited his friend, Sam Bosgiorno, 29 years old, to go calling with him last evening. When Sam demurred on the ground that he had a hole in his pants, Frank reassured him.

"This girl we are going to see is handy with needle and thread. She'll fix it," he said.

Together they went to the home of Miss Mary Warneyus at 1521 South Jefferson street. They were greeted cordially, but when Frank suggested that needle and thimble work was in order, Mary objected. One word led to another, but none led to any stitches. So the angry Frank drew a pistol and fired at Mary.

Now there are three holes in Sam's pants. For his friend's bullet missed Mary and struck him in the fleshy part of his left leg. It punctured the pants once as it went in and once as it went out. The police are looking for Frank and Sam is looking for a new seamstress.

Rob Sheridan Road Couple of $35,000 Gems

After trailing them from downtown, two bandits late last night held up Benjamin Beris, president of the American Glass company, and his wife, Minnie, in the rear of their home at 5940 Sheridan road, and robbed them of jewelry valued at $35,800.

There was no physical violence. However, Beris, his wife, and their colored chauffeur, Homer Chapman of 209 East 56th street, were threatened with death if they resisted. The loot consisted of a bracelet set with 2,000 small diamonds valued at $25,000; a diamond necklace which cost $10,000; an engagement ring worth $800, and $30 in cash.

Dons Gems for Good-by Party.

Mrs. Beris is to depart Wednesday for an European journey, and this indirectly led to her heavy jewelry loss. Because she was to be absent for some time she arranged to meet many of her friends in a final visit at a dinner of an infant welfare association at the Terrace Gardens last night. Her husband accompanied her. For the occasion Mrs. Beris wore some of her more expensive gems.

Apparently the jewels were noted by the bandits in the loop, and they followed Mrs. Beris and her husband. As the Beris car proceeded northward the robber car trailed. Chapman drove in Thorndale avenue to the paved roadway leading to the rear entrance of the Beris home. The bandit car was right behind.

Menaces Trio with Gun.

Before Chapman could open the door one of the gunmen covered him with a revolver. The other faced Beris and his wife. The third waited in the robbers' car. "She must hand over that jewelry," ordered the bandit standing at the rear side door, pointing to Mrs. Beris. She handed over the bracelet and the necklace. "We want the ring, too," he commanded, indicating it. Mrs. Beris pleaded to keep the band but was forced to surrender it.

The robber turned to Beris and mentioned he understood Beris carried large sums of money. The glass manufacturer denied he had much cash, but emptied his pockets of $30. The holdup completed, the two outlaws raced to their own machine and were driven away.

Daughter, 11, Sees Holdup.

Their flight was observed by the Berises' daughter, Dorothy, 11 years old, who was awakened from sleep in her room on the second floor, and she called Summerdale police. Two other children, Norman, 6, and Freda, 4, were not disturbed. Nor was their nurse, Thea Tischernko. Mrs. Beris became slightly hysterical after the robbery. She and her husband drove to the detective bureau this morning to view photographs. One of the bandits, Beris said, spoke in Yiddish.

The Beris home is one of the largest on Sheridan road. It was purchased in 1927 for a reported $120,000 and contains a $25,000 pipe organ.

SERGEANT MALONEY PUTS UP A CRACKING ARGUMENT AND WINS

"Fiddlesticks," interjected a listener.

"Fortunately," said Sergt. Maloney, "I have escaped without harm. I have never been shot. Neither have I been kicked by a horse, nor has my gun failed in a pinch. But all these could have happened."

He emphasized the word "could" with another bang of his fist on the desk. There was an echoing crash, only louder. Sergt. Maloney's chair had crashed to the floor.

Sergt. Maloney had won his argument. He was taken home to 7547 Rhodes avenue with two cracked ribs.

6 KULAKS TO DIE, TEN JAILED FOR ANTI-SOVIET PLOT

EFRIMOF, U. S. S. R., April 19.—(AP)—Six kulaks (rich peasants) were sentenced to be shot and ten others, including a woman, were sentenced to imprisonment from three to ten years today for counter-revolutionary activities. The crowded courtroom received the verdict with loud applause. The convicted kulaks had started an intensive campaign against the government, one of them had been "elected" president of their community, and another secretary. The government learned of their action and immediately arrested the sixteen leaders of the movement.

Madison, Wis., April 19.—[Special.]—The kidnaping of a young bride by her husband and two other men in New York ended here today with the capture of the three men and the rescue of the girl. The arrest and rescue came about through a hastily scribbled note left by her in a filling station near La Porte, Ind.

The principals in the abduction, which covered almost half the width of the country in its course, are: Helen Fisher Drill, 20 years old, of St. Paul, said to be heiress to a $50,000 estate; Harry E. Drill, 30 years old, also of St. Paul, and nephew of Lewis L. Drill, United States district attorney in that city; Howard Caldwell, 30, St. Paul, formerly of this city, and Elmer Peterson, also of St. Paul.

Kidnaped in New York.

Mrs. Drill was spirited away from in front of her home at 504 West 112th street, New York, Wednesday night. Police were notified by Lou Lombardi, her landlord, who knew Mrs. Drill as Mary Laterre, student at the City college. Investigators found no trace of her until 3 o'clock this morning at La Porte.

The abduction party drove up to a filling station on the outskirts of the Indiana city. While the attendant was refueling the automobile, Mrs. Drill stepped into the washroom. She wrote hastily on a paper towel and pinned the paper to the wall. The message read:

"Have been kidnaped. Police inform (name of person deleted by police), in Port Richmond, N. Y. Next stop is Madison, Wis. Have sent my clothes to Park hotel there."

Girl's Stunt Succeeds.

Mrs. Drill realized she could not hand the note to the attendant without attracting suspicion. She hit upon a clever stunt. She turned the basin faucet on full and stepped from the room. Her hope was that the attendant would hear the water running, investigate, and find the note. Her hope was fulfilled. The attendant did investigate, saw the message, and notified Sheriff Tom MacDonald of La Porte county. The latter and a squad took after the kidnapers, but were too far behind to catch them.

Sheriff MacDonald notified Sheriff Fred Finn of Dane county, Wisconsin, to watch for Mrs. Drill and her abductors. All day the approaches to Madison were under watch. This afternoon Drill, Caldwell and Peterson, with Mrs. Drill, appeared at the Park hotel. Sheriff Finn and his men promptly placed them under arrest and took the men to the county jail. Mrs. Drill also was detained.

Hired to Drive South.

The story as revealed here is that Drill and Caldwell hired Peterson a week ago to drive them to Alabama from St. Paul. Their route was to be through Pittsburgh. At Pittsburgh Drill told Peterson he desired to be driven to New York to see Mrs. Drill. Peterson recalled that he had a friend, Robert Hufnagle, a post-graduate student at Columbia university, in New York.

In New York the Minnesotans got in touch with Hufnagle, it is said. Hufnagle, according to published reports yesterday, called at Mrs. Drill's home in New York last Friday, two days following the kidnaping, and tried to obtain Mrs. Drill's personal effects. He carried a key to her room. His efforts were foiled by Lombardi. Later Hufnagle told police he was an innocent victim in the kidnaping. He also declared he had witnessed the kidnaping, but denied participation.

First Messages Unseen.

In any event, according to the stories divulged here, Drill and Caldwell waited outside Mrs. Drill's home Wednesday night. They threw a coat over her head and dragged her into U. S. Cruisers Rush to Guard Yanks.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, April 19.—[By Radio to the Associated Press.]—Rebels headed by Gen. Ramon Dias attacked Tela this afternoon at 3 o'clock and after severe fighting were repelled by government troops commanded by Gen. Jose Reina. The exact number of casualties was unknown.

Other rebels attacked Sonaguera, but also were repulsed. At Saba and near Progreso, government troops defeated rebels headed by Mariano Gonzales and Ladislao Santos.

U. S. Rushes Three Cruisers.

Washington, D. C., April 19.—(AP)—Three of the navy's swiftest cruisers were speeding tonight to protect American citizens on the north coast of Honduras, where revolution has broken out against the Liberal régime of President Mejia Colindres.

Minister Julius G. Lay at Tegucigalpa, Honduras, reported a revolutionary outbreak late Saturday near half a dozen north coast ports, where American fruit companies have large interests and Americans live.

Cruiser Heads for Honduras.

The light cruiser Memphis steamed out of Puerto Cabezas, principal Nicaraguan insurgent trouble center, where she had been standing by, with orders to proceed to Ceiba, largest port on the north Honduras coast, visiting Puerto Castilla on the way. The Memphis is due at Ceiba at 8 a. m. tomorrow.

The cruisers Trenton and Marblehead were ordered from Guantanamo, Cuba, base of the United States scouting force, to Trujillo and Puerto Cortez. American women and children in the Trujillo district have been concentrated in Puerto Castilla.

The immediate revolutionary threat appeared to be directed at Tela, 65 miles west of Ceiba, where a steamer of the United Fruit company was held in port to evacuate Americans if necessary. No uprising is reported at Tegucigalpa, the capital.

Carry Rifles and Dynamite.

American officials reported the Honduran revolutionaries were under the banner of Gen. Gregorio Ferrera, a former minister of war, who led an unsuccessful revolution in 1924.

Unofficial advices tonight said Gen. Ramon Diaz, having captured the town of Progreso, has commandeered a train on the Tela railway and moved on to Uraco, 20 miles from Progreso, where he was to meet Ferrera. These advices said Diaz's 800 men were armed with rifles and dynamite.

The same advices said early today another revolutionary movement broke out in the Black river district, where rebels had commandeered an engine on the Trujillo railroad.

The government did not relax its vigil along the east coast of Nicaragua, where a week ago eight American civilians and one marine captain were slain by Sandinista outlaws. At the same time the Memphis was ordered away, the navy instructed the gunboat Asheville, standing guard at Cape Gracias a Dios, 90 miles to the north, to move to Puerto Cabezas. The aircraft carrier Langley, with thirty planes aboard, has also been ordered to this area. Latest reports indicate that all was quiet in Puerto Cabezas, Cape Gracias a Dios, and Bluefields.

In Honduras, American forces and the American government, it was stated, will maintain a strict neutrality.

a revolution with fighting between Honduran government and revolutionary forces at Progreso in dispatches received tonight by the Standard Fruit and Steamship company, which has extensive holdings in the area.

No information had been received of the outcome of the battle, but both revolutionists and the government were reported hurriedly assembling their forces. American women and children were being rushed out of the interior and concentrated at Ceiba and Trujillo.

The revolutionists, who started last night with a small detachment, were reported gaining recruits along the way from native laborers and farmers armed with rifles, pistols, machetes and other weapons. The dispatches said authorities regarded the revolution as serious as that of 1924.

Gen. Gregorio Ferrera, who is leading the revolution, is described as the strongest military figure in the country. The aim of the revolutionists was said to be the capture of four of the principal ports of the country, Ceiba, Tela, Trujillo, and Puerto Cortez.

800 Rebels March on City.

A detachment of 800 revolutionists in command of Gen. Lopez Guitterrez was reported headed for Trujillo. Guitterrez was described as another experienced revolutionist who participated in the 1924 uprising. Gen Ferrera was reported to have announced that his followers would not disturb foreigners or foreign property and that he had a friendly attitude toward America. No reports have been received of injury to foreigners or damage to foreign property.

President Mejia was reported to have sent out detachments to reconnoiter the revolutionists' position. The government's armed forces were estimated at 5,000, but were reported to be handicapped by lack of funds. Fruit companies already have received reports of laborers deserting their large plantations to take sides in the revolution.

Sails With U. S. Refugees.

The steamship Contessa sailed today from Puerto Cabezas carrying the last of the American women and children in the Nicaraguan bandit area. The Contessa will stop at Ceiba, Honduras, and take aboard other refugees fleeing from the Honduran revolution. It is due in New Orleans at the end of the week.

AVERS BANDITS ARE INVITED TO KILL AMERICANS

San Francisco, Cal., April 19.—(AP)—United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California tonight declared the United States was inviting "assassination of innocent Americans and others by Nicaraguan bandits" by "saying we cannot protect the lives of our citizens."

The senator said he "humbly" suggested the government give a little time to thought of its own citizens in this hemisphere in connection with recent Nicaraguan developments.

"Last January, just after the killing of ten or twelve of our marines, I introduced and the senate passed a resolution calling upon the secretary of state for information concerning the situation in Nicaragua," said Senator Johnson. "I remarked then that the United States should pursue one of two courses—either withdraw the marines entirely or send enough there to do the job.

"The administration has done neither. We now invite assassination of innocent Americans and others by Nicaraguan bandits and take the humiliating position of saying we cannot protect the lives of our citizens."

WORLD EYING POLICY CHANGE FOR CARIBBEAN

President Reverses His Predecessors.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 19.—[Special.]—On the heels of President Hoover's announcement of a change in Caribbean policy withdrawing protection of Americans and their property in Nicaragua and other Central American countries a revolution broke out in Honduras today.

LIBBY.
[Kadel & Herbert].

In accord with the new policy which is to protect Americans so far as possible with warships at seaboard points, but not in the interior, the navy department at the instance of Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson dispatched three cruisers to Honduras.

The announcement of the new Hoover policy in the Caribbean region, which departs from that pursued by his predecessors, is the most sensational development in the western hemisphere in a long time.

In announcing that the United States will not protect its citizens and their property in the interior of Nicaragua, Mr. Hoover has thrown overboard the policy of policing Caribbean countries whenever necessary to the protection of Americans and their interests.

Roosevelt, in inaugurating this policy, based it on the theory that it is an implied corollary of the Monroe Doctrine. The United States, according to this theory, was obliged to intervene for the protection of all foreigners in order to obviate intervention by European nations for the protection of their nationals which might involve violation of the Monroe Doctrine. President Coolidge based the policy on even broader grounds.

Severe Test May Come.

The new Hoover policy is being watched closely by other governments, particularly because of its bearing on the Monroe Doctrine. It may be subjected to a severe test at any time. The test might come about as the result of the killing of a number of Americans under the disturbed conditions prevailing in Nicaragua. The reaction of the American people to such an incident would indicate whether the Hoover policy of withdrawing protection from Americans and their holdings in the Caribbean region is approved or condemned.

Or, the test may be provided by the killing of British, Italians, or other Europeans, of whom there are a large number in Nicaragua, by the dispatch of foreign warships to the Caribbean or by demands made upon Washington by other nations to state whether such protection is to be extended by the United States or other powers are to be allowed to land troops to safeguard their own nationals. In 1927 President Coolidge dispatched the marines to Nicaragua in order to avert intervention by Great Britain and Italy, which had ordered warships to the Caribbean to protect British and Italian subjects in jeopardy.

Navy Acts Automatically.

It was not without a considerable wrench to the machinery of state that Mr. Hoover succeeded in throwing the Coolidge policy overboard. It had become so well understood that the United States would protect Americans and their property anywhere in the Caribbean that when the word reached Washington of the fresh outbreak of disorder in Nicaragua involving the killing of Americans the navy department acted automatically. The cruiser Memphis was dispatched instanter from the navy base at Guantanamo, Cuba, to the east coast of Nicaragua.

The Memphis had been on its way more than 12 hours when Mr. Hoover learned what had been done. He was greatly upset. He summoned Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson. They discussed the crisis precipitated by the warlike act of the navy department. They discovered to their horror that the Memphis not only was heavily laden with shot and shell but was bristling from stem to stern with the bayonets of marines ready for action ashore.

Orders Memphis Back.

Mr. Hoover ordered the Memphis sent back to Guantanamo. The explanation current at the navy department was that Mr. Hoover felt the effect of a display of naval force by the United States off the Nicaraguan coast would be extremely unfortunate in Latin America, where Uncle Sam is pictured as a militaristic imperialist bent on gobbling up inoffensive Caribbean republics. The Memphis was about 18 hours out from Guantanamo when the order came to return.

No sooner had the Memphis reached Guantanamo, however, than the situation in Nicaragua took a fresh turn for the worse, with Americans clamoring for protection at numerous places, not only in the interior, but along the east coast. Mr. Hoover and Mr. Stimson reluctantly reached the conclusion that it would be necessary to get additional naval forces to the region and the upshot was another order, this time from the White House, for the Memphis to steam to Nicaragua.

Pacifists Favor Policy.

The policy which Mr. Hoover has now put into effect is one for which the pacifist organizations, particularly the National Council for Prevention of War, head by the Quaker, Frederick J. Libby, the Federal Council of Churches, and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, have been clamoring for years. They have contended that the United States should cease to protect Americans and their investments abroad. The women's league greeted the new Hoover policy with a letter to Mr. Stimson congratulating him on "initiating a new policy for our government which we believe not only to be wise, but also for the best interests of peace throughout Central America and hence for business everywhere."

Mr. Hoover was strongly opposed to the Coolidge intervention in Nicaragua in 1927, which he regarded a tragic mistake. He remarked at that time that this intervention had given the relations of the United States with Latin America a setback of at least fifty years.

Borah Applauds Policy.

In those days Mr. Hoover was in close touch with Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho], chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, who was openly assailing the Coolidge policy.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

17 Captains' Accounts Will Be Examined.

Detectives from the state's attorney's office this morning will start serving loop bank and managers of safe deposit vaults with subpoenas directing them to produce before the special grand jury at once all their records bearing on the financial affairs of seventeen police captains and their families.

As rapidly as the records are obtained they will be taken before the grand jury, which is investigating charges of police corruption. It was explained that the investigation of any undue wealth shown in the bank accounts of the seventeen captains is only a start in the inquiry to be made by the jury.

Wide Scope for Inquiry.

The finances of all the high police officials and of a number of sergeants will come under scrutiny. The subpoenas duces tecum call for production of the records before the jury will be served on some 220 banks in Chicago and Cook county if necessary.

Acting Police Commissioner Alcock, Chief of Detectives Norton, and all other captains and bureau heads are to have their finances studied by the special grand jury, according to Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, who, with Assistant State's Attorney Charles B. Lounsbury, is in charge of presenting evidence to the jury.

The seventeen captains whose names appear on the subpoenas were not especially selected, Mr. Mueller declared. Subpoenas naming the rest of the police officials will be issued later, he said. The jury is not starting out with any presumptions, he explained, but wants the facts and figures.

U. S. May See Records.

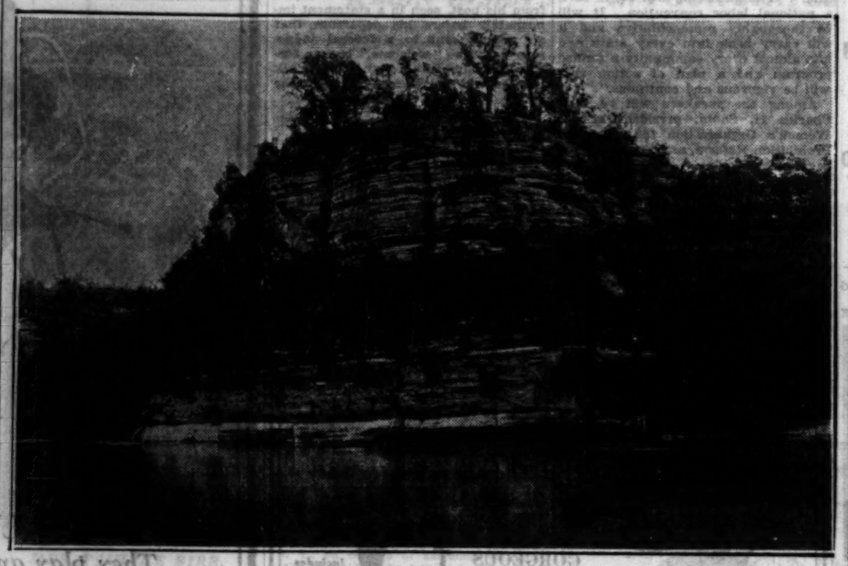
The federal government will be given access to the records of the incomes of the police commanders if its agents wish to examine them, according to Prosecutor Mueller. District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson, whose income tax campaign against the politico-criminal alliance has resulted in the conviction or guilty pleas of seven gangsters and two politicians, had no comment to make on the statement of Prosecutor Mueller last night.

It is known that federal agents have investigated the incomes of some police captains, but Mr. Johnson said that he was not permitted under the revenue laws to give the results of his investigation to the state grand jury. He would not say whether any action against captains is contemplated at this time.

Six Captains Questioned.

In the government's inquiry last fall, at least six captains were questioned. Federal agents reported they had found one captain who built and paid cash for a $40,000 home in 1928. Another was said to have deposited $30,000 in a bank within three months. Another was reported to have lost $150,000 in the stock market. An 800 acre farm in Wisconsin belonging to another police official was reported.

OBJECTIVE OF 12,000 CHICAGO AUTOISTS



Starved Rock, historic spot on the Illinois river just below Ottawa, Ill., which was visited by 12,000 Chicago motorists yesterday. The 900 acres on the wooded banks of the river constitute a state park which has both scenic and historic attraction. The park itself is only 100 miles from Chicago and is reached by a road which winds along a beautiful river valley.

COAST GUARD HUNTS ARMY MINE PLANTER SAFE IN PORT BERTH

Norfolk, Va., April 19.—(AP)—Navy and coast guard units in this vicinity ended a three day vigil this afternoon when they were informed by a newspaper reporter the army mine planter Graham, for which they had been searching, was safely tied up at Fortress Montroe, her official destination, and had been there since yesterday.

An alarm was sounded when the craft failed to make a routine daily report of her position after Tuesday noon and merchant ships as well as coast guard and navy craft were asked to look for the mine planter.

Master James E. Murray said this afternoon the trip had been uneventful, but his radio apparatus failed to raise any one. Arrival of the Graham had not been reported to those who had been asked to search for her, however, up to this afternoon.

Anti-Cruelty Society to Be Formed in Evanston

A meeting is to be held in the courtroom of Magistrate Porter in Evanston at 8 p. m. tomorrow to form an Evanston Anti-Cruelty society. Mrs. Lillian Lundahl, principal organizer, said that she expected to see 200 members pledged to improve conditions for small animals, enroll in a short time.

12,000 CHICAGO AUTOISTS MOTOR TO STARVED ROCK

Enjoy Rural Evidences of Early Spring.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Starved Rock State Park, Ill., April 19.—[Special.]—Twelve thousand Chicago motorists today visited these historic and scenic 900 acres on the wooded banks of the Illinois river a hundred miles from Michigan avenue and Jackson boulevard. They composed eighty-five per cent of the day's attendance, according to Custodian James R. Williams, and it was a record crowd so far this year, notwithstanding the fact that skies were occasionally overcast.

The automobile section of today's SUNDAY TRIBUNE recommended the drive down the Illinois river valley. Copies of the newspaper were found in waste receptacles, discarded by picnickers.

Paved Roads Crowded.

When THE TRIBUNE'S road car left Chicago late this morning, Sunday excursionists were streaming out all pavement exits from the city, with the heaviest traffic toward the south, where the trees are leafing two or three weeks in advance of those in the Chicago parks. On the Joliet road, there was a detour sign directing traffic to use the Willow Springs road and Archer avenue to Joliet. There was no barricade at the Willow Springs road so most of the cars proceeded southwest on the Joliet road until a barrier was encountered twenty-six miles from Chicago.

There was a dusty and rough side road used as a detour for 2.8 miles around a place where a crew was working on Sunday, rushing a gas line to the city. Motorists complained about this detour. It had not been reported by the central traffic bureau, which is supposed to give notice of such conditions. Furthermore, neither the state nor the pipe line company had done anything toward putting this gravel road in condition for detour traffic.

Picnickers Numerous.

Outside of this 2.8 miles, the hundred mile drive over gentle hills, through rich farm country and swinging around the bluffs on the banks of the river seemed to give the motorists all that they had expected. Here in the state park there were families picnicking on the grass, and men and women and children climbing the trails where birds and wild flowers abound.

Other hundreds of Chicago motorists, distinguishable by their city vehicle tags, were proceeding down the route recommended in the SUNDAY TRIBUNE along the Illinois river to Peoria.

NEW PREMIER OF RUMANIA HINTS AT DICTATORSHIP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, Rumania, April 19.—A threat of dictatorship in Rumania was contained today in a series of declarations by Dr. Nicholas Jorga on the first day of his premiership. In an interview with newspaper men he said: "If the Rumanian parliament intends to commit suicide, I am unable to prevent it."

Dr. Jorga added that he is opposed to a dictatorship, being a supporter of the parliamentary system, and that he is not thinking of a dissolution of parliament. The only solution, he said, was a form of government which, when passion has been calmed by a steady economic policy, could subsequently unite all political forces to cooperate in creating the new institutions which the country required.

Dr. Jorga declared that he will try his best to coöperate with all the political parties, and that the cabinet has agreed to call on both houses of parliament on May 5 for a vote of confidence. The cabinet has no specific program, but wants to build up the nation. It will continue a peaceful foreign policy with other governments.

BURGLAR SUSPECT SLAIN.

Delphi, Ind., April 19.—(AP)—Oren Day, 32, of Logansport, Ind., was killed late tonight by police officers who sought to arrest him on a charge of burglary. Day had started to run down an alley, police in pursuit. After three shouted warnings to Day to stop, the officers fired at him. One bullet pierced his heart and he died instantly.

EX-DRY OFFICER SAYS REPEAL IS ONLY SOLUTION

People "Disgusted" with Conditions, He Avers.

New York, April 19.—[Special.]—More citizens are daily becoming disgusted with prohibition and see repeal of the eighteenth amendment as the only remedy, Maj. Maurice Campbell, former prohibition director for the eastern district of New York, informed Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of Beverly, Mass., chairman of the women's national committee for law enforcement, in a letter which he made public today.

MAJ. MAURICE CAMPBELL [Acme Photo.]

In a statement accompanying the letter Maj. Campbell declares that "prohibition under the Hoover administration has been shifted into low gear." He states the reason his letter to Mrs. Peabody is made public is because the women's national committee for law enforcement appears to be satisfied with the mild program of enforcement adopted by the administration, while "yet asserting its stand for militant, confident and dramatic backing of the constitution."

Tells Why He Writes.

Maj. Campbell said he wrote Mrs. Peabody April 8 in the hope that the committee, in its report to President Hoover, might call his attention to existing conditions in prohibition enforcement. He added that the committee failed to disclose to the President any of the points or suggestions made in his letter. The committee met in Washington April 10 and 11.

In its report to the President the committee gave unqualified indorsement of the eighteenth amendment and voices opposition to resubmission, modification, revision or repeal of the prohibition laws.

Maj. Campbell, who now edits "The Repeal," a publication for the purpose of keeping the American people "fully informed regarding the failure of the prohibition law," in his letter to Mrs. Peabody declared prohibition law enforcement machinery has broken down and wrote, "Has it ever occurred to you that because of your complacent acceptance of insincere enforcement, and the declaration of President Hoover for retention of the 18th amendment, more and more citizens are daily becoming more and more disgusted with prohibition and see repeal as the only remedy?"

Committee Is Criticized.

Maj. Campbell declares the women's national committee for law enforcement, fearing to jeopardize its friendly relations with the present administration and the Republican party, did not demand an immediate and thorough investigation of the prohibition enforcement situation.

"But perhaps the women of your organization have not kept abreast of the times," he wrote. "Perhaps you still believe in the sincerity of the present administration; perhaps you have not heard of the charges of insincerity I made some months ago against Andrew M. Mellon, Ogden Mills, Seymour Lowman, James M. Doran, and many others; perhaps, notwithstanding the proofs I exhibited, you did not believe them, or perhaps because of the political situation you thought it wisest to ignore them."

Maj. Campbell quotes Seymour Lowman of the treasury department, in charge of prohibition, as saying that he [Campbell] had it too dry in New York. He also told Mrs. Peabody that Col. Amos W. Woodcock, present director of the bureau of prohibition, while United States attorney in Baltimore was presented with evidence concerning a bootleg ring engaged in the annual diversion of 2,000,000 gallons of alcohol, and "that the principals were indicted but never brought to trial."

LABOR MOVES FOR RETURN OF 'SANITY TO U. S.'

Asks Dry Law Change to Restore Temperance.

Washington, D. C., April 19.—(AP)—Organized labor today announced plans for initiating a nation-wide campaign for "a return of temperance and sanity" through modification of the Volstead act.

MATHEW WOLL.

Announcement was made by labor's national committee for modification, set up by the American Federation of Labor, that a meeting would be held in Philadelphia April 27 and 28 by 200 elected delegates from all parts of the country.

Mathew Woll, president of the committee and a vice president of the American Federation of Labor, said "a network of local organizations reaching into every American community will be formed" immediately after the conference.

Make Move National.

The announcement from the labor committee of its plan of campaign for a return of beer and wine said it intended to "use all honorable means" to secure this end.

"Ranking officers of most of the national and international unions will attend the conference," the statement said. "The gathering will be, in fact, a national labor convention. It will be thoroughly representative and it will carry back into every state and into almost every community a unified program and a plan of action that will be vigorous and continous."

Among the speakers will be Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, president of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, and Senator Wagner of New York.

Church Hits Quebec Control.

Meantime, the Methodist Episcopal Board of Temperance hit out again at the Quebec liquor control system. An article in its weekly clip sheet said the board had reached the "staggering conclusion that, apart from its consumption of beers, Quebec has, through its liquor commission sales, increased its consumption of absolute alcohol over 54 per cent in six years."

While these statements were being issued in Washington, Prohibition Director Woodcock was en route to Denver for an inspection of conditions in eight of the northwestern states and Hawaii.

A hint that he would like to retire from his post, seen in a statement immediately before his departure that an appointment to a federal judgeship would be "welcome," had no further developments today. Woodcock said he was not campaigning for the post.

Labor Federation Urges Reappointment of Lueder

Reappointment of Arthur C. Lueder as postmaster of Chicago was urged in a resolution adopted yesterday at a meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor. Mr. Lueder's term has expired. The resolution, presented by the Chicago Federation of Musicians, and directed to Senator Otis Glenn, states that Postmaster Lueder "during his term of office has been heartily in accord with the operation of organized labor."

Both Ships Dock with First Spring Cargoes.

With a cargo of 2,453,000 pounds of paper in its hold the steamer New York News, of THE TRIBUNE fleet, docked at THE TRIBUNE'S warehouses near the mouth of the Chicago river at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, winning an $80 mile race through the great lakes from Thorold, Ont. It brought the spring's first lake shipment of paper to Chicago from the mills of the Ontario Paper company, a Tribune subsidiary.

The News' rival in the race, the specially designed motorship Thorold, followed nine and a half hours later in the Chicago river. Her cargo is more than twice that of the News and the heavy loading slowed her running time. Both ships left the mill on the Welland canal at 3:15 p. m. Wednesday and steamed out into Lake Erie on even keel the same evening.

News Pulls Into Lead.

From then on the lighter craft, under the command of Capt. F. V. McIntyre, veteran lakes seaman, pulled steadily away from the Thorold, piloted by Capt. George Ferguson, another veteran skipper.

An unloading crew emptied the hold of the News during the afternoon and night. They were still at work when the larger ship, which went into service only last year, pulled into the dock. The News was scheduled to leave early this morning for Fort William, on the northern shore of Lake Superior, where she was to take on a cargo of grain for Montreal.

Will Carry Pulpwood.

From Montreal she was to proceed down the St. Lawrence to Shelter bay, several hundred miles northeast of the city of Quebec. THE TRIBUNE'S timber lands are located there, and the News will be used to carry pulpwood from that point to the Thorold mill through the summer.

The Thorold, which has a capacity of about 2,000 tons, will be used to convey rolls of paper from the mill to Chicago. Her first 1931 cargo will be loaded today and she is scheduled to start her return trip to Thorold tomorrow.

POISON FATAL

MRS. PAULINE BIRR.

Mrs. Pauline Birr, 25 years old, who swallowed poison last Monday at her home, 1638 Greenleaf avenue, died last night at the Rogers Park hospital. Her 10 year old daughter, Virginia, to whom she gave a dose of the same poison, was reported to be recovering at the hospital. Mrs. Birr, according to her husband, was despondent over illness.

WOMAN CHARGES SHE WAS RAPED BY POLICEMAN

Andrew Gallagher, 28 years old, of 2333 Osgood street, a probationary policeman attached to the Chicago avenue station, was arrested yesterday by Town Hall police on a charge of rape preferred by Mrs. Anna Kombas, 47 years old, of 3225 North Halsted street. He was held without formal charges for investigation.

Mrs. Kombas appeared at the Town Hall station and told Lieut. Jens Hanson and Sergt. John Walsh that Gallagher had called at her home earlier and asked for Rose, a girl who at one time lived in her house. Mrs. Kombas said the girl was no longer with her. The policeman forced her inside, she asserted, and attacked her. She ran from the house and called the police. Lieut. Hanson and Sergt. Walsh found Gallagher still in the Kombas home. He was drunk, they said. He was stripped of his star and gun and locked up.

FOUND SHOT TO DEATH.

Alex Polino, 53 years old, was found shot to death in the back yard of his home at 7351 South Lincoln street yesterday, apparently a suicide. His body was found by the widow, Phillina Polino.

U. S. IS FIRST IN WORLD EXPORTS, KLEIN INSISTS

Washington, D. C., April 19.—(AP)—The United States was said tonight by Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, to be leading the world in exports, with no indications that it will soon take second place.

In an address he said, "We cannot but admit quite frankly that our exports declined markedly in value in 1930. And the figures for the early months of 1931," he added, "have shown no recovery as yet."

A comparison of the United States' shares of the goods bought by some of the foreign purchasers last year with the United States' share in 1913 he gave as showing:

"Our share of Canada's purchases from abroad rose from 64.8 per cent in 1913 to 66.1 in 1930. In Brazil from 15 to 24 per cent; Chile, 15 to 33; in Japan, 17 to 32."

"Does that look," he asked, "as if we were being exiled by foreign buyers or failing to match merchandise merit and salesmanship and service and commercial ingenuity with our European rivals?"

GAMBLE TO DECIDE ON FINES.

Twelve men who were arrested in Florida, N. Y., on charges of gambling with dice, gambled in the same manner for the amount of fines they were to pay. The presiding justice ordered each to roll one dice, and the amount of the fine corresponded to the number rolled.

MARRIED AFTER ROMANCE ON BUS IN FOUR STATES

Los Angeles, Cal., April 19.—(AP)—Patrick Henry, Henryetta, Okla., cattleman, and Daisy Frame, Chicago, were married here today after a four state romance.

They met in Texas, shortly after Henry boarded an overland bus on which Miss Frame was riding from Chicago to Los Angeles.

They became fast friends in New Mexico shortly after Miss Frame's sleepy head dropped to the cattleman's shoulder.

They became engaged in Arizona shortly after Henry, whose father founded the town of Henryetta, popped the question while they were riding through the desert under a bright moon.

And the Rev. Edwin W. Mecum was called shortly after the bus arrived here and wedding plans were made. The minister sat in the driver's seat of the bus today and read the ceremony to the couple, seated in the front seat where their romance began, while the bus driver and several of his fellows witnessed the ceremony.

"CIRCUS AGENT" HELPS CAPTURE 9 BOOTLEGGERS

Santa Rosa, Cal., April 19.—(AP)—Santa Rosa citizens in general, and nine bootleggers in particular, have learned the town isn't going to be entertained by a circus after all.

Several days ago an "advance agent" placarded the community with posters promising the appearance of King Zula Lura from Africa and many other interesting entertainers.

Last night District Attorney Emmett Donohue completely shattered expectations of the citizenry. The advance agent, it appears, was a prohibition agent.

The alleged bootleggers were arrested when they appeared at the circus grounds. Mr. Donohue said they responded to the advance agent's request for a supply of alcoholic beverages.

SAVINGS BANKS TO CONVENE.

New York, April 19.—(AP)—Unemployment and its effects on savings and industry will be discussed at the annual conference of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, May 20 to 22, in Washington, Henry Bruere, president, announced today.

BLOND WOMAN BANDIT IS BOSS OF THIS HOLDUP

A blond woman who did all the talking and the pistol work and a man who meekly obeyed when she addressed him held up George Matson last evening in his delicatessen store at 4262 Kenmore avenue and robbed him of $32.

When the pair entered the woman asked Matson if he would get her a drink of water. He went to a faucet in his living quarters behind the store and she followed. As he turned the blond was holding a pistol she had drawn from under her coat.

"Show us where you keep your money," she said. "Be quick about it, too, or I'll shoot."

Matson protested he had no money but that in the cash register, but the gungirl forced him into a bedroom. Then he told her there was a roll of bills under the pillow. At the woman's command the male robber took it. She covered his retreat with the money, then thrust her pistol back under her coat and followed him to the street.

THE FIRST STORY OF AL CAPONE IN LINGLE INQUIRY

Gang Chief Offers to Help Find the Murderer.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

CHAPTER XVII.

There came a time, during the investigation of the murder of Alfred Lingle when Scarface Al Capone himself, the king of the gangs, came bearing the white flag of truce, suing for peace.

Al Capone, disturbed at last, his vaunted power over police and politicians upset by a handful of honest men working under the orders of Pat Roche and Charles Rathbun.

These officials had reckoned that somewhere along the gang front the lines would break under a constant pressure of raids and gangster arrests. They were right, but they little realized how high up the break would be.

The first word from the gangs since the investigators of the Lingle murder case began their earnest assault upon the gangsters and the resorts of Capone.

Secret Closely Guarded.

Oddly enough, the date of such a momentous occasion has been forgotten. There never was even a memorandum taken of what transpired with the gang czar, so closely was the secret guarded. But recollection of other events places the date at about the 21st of October.

And the mind does not fail in recalling the facts surrounding the activities of Scarface Al Capone in the Lingle murder case.

A wealthy business man appeared in the office of the investigators at the Temple building and he asked to see Rathbun and Roche. He was admitted and at once, in low tones that would not reach the adjoining offices, he stated his mission.

"The 'big fellow' wants to see you."

The "big fellow" was Al Capone.

Meeting Finally Arranged.

But Rathbun and Roche didn't want to see Capone; they wanted to fight him. No good to any one could come of an interview between Rathbun and Roche and Capone. Nevertheless, the spokesman for the king of the gangs persisted, and at length it was agreed that a representative of the Lingle staff would meet Capone. His identity and the identity of the Capone messenger will remain a secret, and the reasons for this would seem to be obvious.

The Rathbun-Roche agent, who will be designated for convenience as Operative No. 1, met with the Capone spokesman late on a night about the 21st of October. It should be remembered that at this time the gang chieftain was being sought on a vagrancy warrant issued by Judge Lyle, and the operative was warned not to attempt an arrest.

He had no previous knowledge of where he and Capone were to meet, and that night he was led by the Capone representative to the latter's suburban home, a handsome residence surrounded by old elms and beautifully landscaped grounds. During the ride out there, Capone's man was careful to guard against followers.

Operative Meets Capone.

They entered the home. A servant took their coats, and then Operative No. 1 was led into the drawing room. There stood Alphonse Capone.

The gang boss came forward with hand advanced in greeting, and he beckoned the visitor to a chair by the fireplace. Capone took another chair, and his heavy bulk sank deeply into the downy cushions. The host withdrew, leaving Capone and Operative No. 1 alone.

"Here's what I want to tell you, and I won't be long about it," said Capone. "I can't stand the gaff of these raids and pinches. If it's going to keep up, I'll have to pack up and get out of Chicago."

The "heat" had begun to blister, no doubt. Barker sent back to prison. White facing a new trial for murder. Sammons arrested. Maddox arrested. Capone himself facing a vagrancy charge. The gang's dens of profit shut down.

Lingle Murder Enters Talk.

Operative No. 1 replied:

"So far as I can tell you, the gaff is on for keeps. This town has been burning up since Jake Lingle was murdered."

"Well, I didn't kill Jake Lingle, did I?"

"We don't know who killed him."

"Why didn't you ask me? Maybe I can find out for you."

"Maybe you can."

"I don't know what the fellow that killed Jake looks like. I know none of my fellows did it. I liked Lingle, and certainly I didn't have any reason to kill him."

Capone was given a complete description of the killer. Operative No. 1 thought this rather a useless procedure, since the description had been widely broadcast and Capone must certainly have been curious enough on his own account to obtain a description of the murderer.

A Motive Is Suggested.

Then the gang leader volunteered what he thought might be the motive for Lingle's murder.

It was just another motive, added to the hundreds of earlier ones which had been advanced, chiefly by the obstructive newspapers of Chicago, most of which were contradictory, and none of which was susceptible of proof.

It should be borne in mind that ascribing these motives for Lingle's murder would be libelous if Lingle were alive and the proof was not forthcoming. And it should also be stated that the motive advanced this night by Capone never was substantiated by any evidence, and undoubtedly was false.

"I have heard," said the gangster overlord, to operative No. 1, "that Lingle was involved in the attempts of the north side gangsters to open a dog track in the Stadium."

The Dog Track Situation.

By way of explanation, it should be stated that up to a month before the murder of Lingle the Capone gang had been operating two dog race tracks, one in Cicero, the other in Thornton. The north side gang had operated the Fairview dog track, but it had burned to the ground.

Meanwhile a movement was put under way to establish an indoor dog race track in the Chicago Stadium, and this was promoted by a Canadian sports promoter, Thomas J. Duggan. Another plan had been discussed to open dog racing at White City.

Chief Investigator Roche summoned Sidney Strotz, president of the Stadium, and Herbert Byfield, president of White City, to his office, and warned both that if attempts were made to start dog racing at either place raids would follow.

The Capone tracks were operating under an injunction against interference by the authorities, issued by the Circuit court, and the Duggan group sought the same privilege. An injunction suit was filed, but this injunction was denied and meanwhile the Supreme and Appellate courts handed down decisions holding dog racing to be illegal.

At the time there was no connection publicly shown between the Duggan project and the north side gang.

The Version of Capone.

Capone, squatted there in his easy chair before the fireplace, told Operative No. 1 that the north side gang was behind the Stadium dog track venture.

"I have been told," the gangster said, "that Lingle was asked by the Zuta crowd to see to it that the police and the state's attorney would not bother them, and that Lingle was paid $30,000.

"Then Pat Roche called in Strotz and Byfield and jammed the works. When the gang saw that they could not go they blamed Jake Lingle, and I think that's why he was pushed (killed).

"But I don't know who they used to do the job; it must have been some fellow from out of town. I'll try to find out."

"You can do this if you want to, Capone," said Operative No. 1, "but don't think it'll help you with Pat Roche."

Reveals Moran Peace Bids.

Capone said nothing. Perhaps he thought that once the Lingle case was solved the "heat" on the gangs would die out. It is more probable that he was playing a shrewd game, as will appear as this tale goes forward.

The gangster revealed that Bugs Moran, who with Joe Aiello represented the sole surviving leaders of the vanquished north side gang, had sent bids for peace to Capone.

"He wants to join up with me," the Big Fellow said, "and maybe I can trade off with him for a bit of information on the Lingle murder. I might take him in if he will tell who killed Jake."

The gang boss told Operative No. 1 that when he had information to give he would send his confidential agent to the operative. The latter was driven away from the house in the host's automobile. He surmised that Capone did not tarry long afterward in that beautiful retreat.

Operative No. 1 reported to Rathbun and Roche what had transpired, and although they doubted the probability of the theory advanced by Capone, they decided there was nothing they could do in the situation but await developments.

KILLING OF JOE AIELLO

Meanwhile the war on the Capone gang was not abated. But Capone did a little warring on his own account, it appeared.

Joe Aiello, that defiant, ambitious Sicilian who aspired so high in the realm of crime, and who had scorned to bow to the rule of Capone, was shot to death on the 23d of October.

Bugs Moran might be spared, but not Aiello.

Joe Aiello was tough, a man whose cruel and murderous traits inflamed his overpowering ambition to lead his people, to reign over the Unione Siciliana, to be the king of bootleggers.

The Lombardo Slaying.

He had been friends with Capone in earlier days, and his closest business friend was Antonio Lombardo. His unreasoning ambition caused Aiello to break with both these friends, and one of them, Lombardo, who was the head of the Unione Siciliana, was shot to death as he walked in the Chicago loop, at the crowded corner of Dearborn and Madison streets.

The bitter feud of Aiello and Capone never died, although twice they had signed treaties of peace—treaties made only to be broken.

Aiello lost the struggle. His partners were killed or they deserted him; his henchmen fled in fear. He was forced into hiding.

And then Aiello went the way of so many of the enemies of Capone.

A Machine Gun Ambush.

Thirty-five steel vested bullets, streaming from machine guns hidden in two nests surrounding Aiello's hiding place, fond marks in the body of Chicago's toughest gangster.

The assassination was staged at Kolmar and West End avenues, on the far west side of Chicago. Aiello had taken refuge in the apartment home of a business partner. Pasquale Prestogiacomo, at 205 North Kolmar avenue.

Somehow the killers of Aiello had learned of his hiding place. They had rented one apartment opposite the Prestogiacomo home with a front window facing directly upon the front doorway of the Aiello refuge, and another apartment in a building just south of the gangster's haven.

Wait 10 Days for Victim.

For ten days the gangsters, their machine guns poised, lay in wait until a time when Aiello should emerge from Prestogiacomo's home. They were patient killers, for their prey never left his refuge until that evening of Oct. 23.

On that night he had made arrangements to go to St. Louis, and he summoned a taxicab, by telephone, to take him to the railway station. When the rain of bullets started Aiello made a last vain draw for his own revolver. Wounded, he ran from the course of fire directed from the one apartment, but he staggered full into the path of the machine gunners in the other apartment, and he fell to the ground and died.

Prestogiacomo disappeared, but later he surrendered for questioning, and he was released. An effort was made to find the men who had rented the apartments from which the murderous fire was directed, but they were never found.

Raids on Gangs Continue.

Rathbun and Roche, with their little group of faithful men, continued their raids upon the dens of the gangs, and meanwhile the state's attorney's office was proceeding with the preparation for the retrial of the Capone gangster, Three-Fingered Jack White, on the old murder charge.

Assistant State's Attorney Harry Ditchburne, who was earning an enviable record as the prosecutor of the public enemies, and who was well assisted by Assistant State's Attorney James Brown, had called in Sergt. James McBride of the Bellwood police, who took part in the 1925 gun battle, which ended in the killing by White of another policeman, Edward Pflaume of the Maywood force.

McBride, rated as one of the best policemen in the west suburbs, joined in the investigation, and assisted the prosecutors in bringing in witnesses. McBride himself was the chief witness against White, since he had witnessed the murder of Pflaume in the Mannheim inn and had been wounded himself by the gangster's fire.

Attempt to Kill McBride.

But the Capone gang was not to submit tamely to the conviction of White. They had once provided lawyers to battle the previous conviction of White to the Illinois Supreme court, and there the life sentence had been reversed and the case ordered to a retrial, which had never been held.

On the morning of the 30th of October McBride was riding in a street car in Maywood, bound for the Criminal courts building for a conference with Ditchburne and Brown.

The car rambled slowly down the Maywood streets, and suddenly a sedan appeared behind the street car, and then it was driven alongside the car, until it came abreast of the window behind which Sergt. McBride was sitting.

Shoots Into Street Car.

A man riding in the front seat of the sedan poked a sawed off shotgun through the automobile window, and at a range of less than a foot he let a single blast go at the sergeant's face.

Heavy slugs in the shotgun charge tore into McBride's shoulder and crashed into his jaw. The sedan sped away from the scene so rapidly that difficulty was encountered by the witnesses in identifying it.

McBride was rushed to a hospital, and Dr. Philip Kreuscher, a noted surgeon and bone specialist, was summoned to treat his wounds. Part of the sergeant's jaw had been blown away, and for a time it was feared that the gangsters' effort to kill the chief witness against Gangster White might be successful. But McBride recovered. He will always carry the scars inflicted by the man who would have murdered him.

SEIZE FUR SAMMONS

When Roche received the news of the assault upon McBride he ordered that every policeman assigned to the state's attorney's office be held in readiness, and he and Prosecutor Rathbun led them personally in a search for White's pals, some of whom might have perpetrated the attack.

Late that night Roche and Rathbun burst into an apartment at 80 North Highland avenue, Riverside, where Fur Sammons was seized, in bed with a .45 caliber automatic at his side. The address was the home of a sister of Three-Fingered Jack White.

Sammons protested that he could not have shot McBride, that he had been in the Criminal courts building at 10 o'clock that morning. McBride was shot at 9:20. It was possible that Sammons could have been at both places, but when the gangster was taken to the bedside of the suffering McBride the sergeant, unable to speak, shook his head.

The Raid to Take Nitti.

Roche and Rathbun, with their men, returned to the Criminal courts building and settled down wearily in chairs in Roche's office. It was past two o'clock in the morning.

Roche's telephone rang.

"Now what the hell at this time of morning!" he exclaimed as he lifted the receiver.

"Hello," he said, and then: "All right, come on over. I'll wait for you."

He turned in his chair and said: "That was the government fellows. They've got a tip on Frank Nitti. They're coming right over and we're going to take Nitti."

Sought on U. S. Charge.

Frank Nitti, the business manager of the Capone gang, a clever gang financier, had been sought for months under a federal indictment charging him with evasion of the federal income tax laws.

The government agents arrived and, with Rathbun, Roche, and several of the latter's men, journeyed out west again, this time to 3201 South Clinton avenue, Berwyn. It was only a few blocks from the Riverside apartment at which Sammons had been caught a few hours earlier. The aces of the Capone gang were finding refuge in the western suburbs, away from the "heat" in Chicago.

While two men guarded the rear of the building, Roche and his men forced the lower door in front and slipped noiselessly to the third floor. Bangs on the door at first met no response, but at last a woman's voice, full of fright, asked who was there.

Nitti Found in Pajamas.

Informed that police officers wanted entrance, the woman at first refused to open the door, but at last the men were admitted. In a bedroom of the lavishly furnished apartment the raiders found a little man in pajamas who protested volubly against the intrusion, and asserted he was Frank Belmont, a reputable business man.

But it was Nitti, and when he saw it was Roche who had him, he made no further pretenses. He was lodged in jail under the federal charge. His young bride, for it was she who had opened the door, was left behind.

In a small cabinet by Nitti's bed the raiders found a clipping from an afternoon newspaper, dated two weeks before. It said: "Nitti on way to Italy as U. S. hunts, report." He must have got a few chuckles out of that one.

Maddox Also Arrested.

Roche had ordered a hunt for Claude Maddox, the Capone gangster and pal of White, who was a suspect in the attack on McBride, and the same day as the Sammons and Nitti captures Maddox was arrested by Investigators Joseph Keating and William Nihill, who had been associated with Prosecutors Ditchburne and Brown and Sergt. McBride in the White murder trial preparations.

Maddox was arraigned on the charge of shooting McBride before Justice of the Peace George Lee of Maywood, who fixed the gangster's bail at $50,000. Later Judge Joseph B. David, on a habeas corpus plea, reduced the bond to $15,000, and then Magistrate Lee, defying Judge David, raised the bond again, this time to $100,000. But Judge David reduced it a second time.

When McBride's condition permitted, he was taken, now heavily guarded, before the grand jury, to testify against Maddox, and the grand jury indicted the gangster and set an unusual precedent by fixing his bail at $50,000.

Refuses to Reduce Bond.

The gang lawyers pleaded with Chief Justice McGoorty to reduce the bond, but he refused, and eventually Maddox's friends were forced to put up $112,000 in real estate as a bond to effect his release. Maddox at this writing is awaiting trial on the assault to murder charge.

The Capone gangsters were being put to strenuous efforts to provide bail for the multitude of charges facing them. Frank Nitti languished in jail for two weeks before he was able to put up the bond required by the federal courts. And Nitti was not used to jail beds and jail fare.

The "heat" was on the Capone gang for fair, but still the king of Chicago gangdom was seeking to clear up the murder of Alfred Lingle—or so he pretended, at least, as will be told.

(Another installment will appear in tomorrow's Tribune.)

GEORGE E. Q. JOHNSON SAYS PRIVILEGE IS SUPPORT OF GANGS

United States District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson, who has won nine convictions in his income tax drive against Chicago's politico-criminal alliance, in a radio broadcast last night declared gangs can be wiped out only by taking away privileges on which they feed. He divided crime into two classes, sporadic crime and organized crime.

"Organized crime operates in four types of violations, prohibition, gambling, racketeering, and vice," Mr. Johnson said. "Organized crime makes crime a business; it is born of privilege. Privilege means immunity to violate the law granted by some law enforcement official. A gang is an organization of men engaged in the business of violating the law, the leader of which is a pasty faced crook with political and police connections, and the members of his gang are graduates from colleges of crime, known as penitentiaries.

"There is just one way to stamp out these gangs and that is to wipe out the thing they feed upon—privilege. If our law enforcement officials make it impossible for these men to make money they will dry up like a wood that has been plucked out by the roots.

"We in Chicago have set our faces squarely against organized crime. As United States attorney I have used every weapon of the law against criminals."

HIT-RUN DRIVERS ADD 3 DEATHS TO TOLL FROM AUTOS

Woman Is Struck as Her Daughter Looks On.

Three Chicagoans died yesterday as a result of automobile accidents in which the drivers fled from the scenes. Two were killed outright and the third died of injuries sustained nearly two weeks ago.

William Schrunback, 44 years old, 4[illegible] West Madison street, was struck near Leavitt and Kinzie streets. The driver continued, leaving Schrunback's body in the street. So far the police have been unable to find any witnesses.

The second victim of unidentified drivers was Mrs. Mary Masek, 43 years old, 2540 Emerald avenue. With her daughter Molly, 18 years old, Mrs. Masek was crossing Throop street at 22nd street when she was struck by a speeding car. The girl said that the automobile was occupied by three men. She was unable to get the number on the license plates.

Woman Dies of Injuries.

Mrs. Ellen Conroy, 55 years old, 4[illegible] Gladys avenue, died in the county hospital of injuries sustained on April 6. She was riding in an automobile which was struck by another and overturned at Harrison street and Leland avenue. The motorist in the second car drove away.

Frank Kopalski, 19 years old, 1846 Bloomingdale avenue, was fatally injured yesterday when he was playing ball in the street at Bloomingdale and Marshfield avenues, and was struck by an automobile driven by John Chuhak, 1[illegible] North Marshfield avenue. Kopalski was taken to St. Mary's hospital, where he died early this morning.

These deaths and three others in Cook county yesterday raised the motor toll for the year to 384.

Third Leaves Truck, Report.

With Zelderman was a man identified through cards in his pockets as W. K. Mott, about 35 years old. Mott was seriously injured. He was taken to St. James hospital in Chicago Heights. A third man, according to witnesses, left the truck after the accident, apparently only slightly injured.

Mrs. Minnie Holmber, 66 years old, 1[illegible] North Irving avenue, died in the Martha Washington hospital of injuries suffered on Friday, when she was struck at Irving Park boulevard and Western avenue by a car driven by Joseph Willem, 1409 Diversey avenue.

An unidentified Negro was struck and killed at South Park way and 40th street by a car driven by Donald Dahndorff, 10703 Avenue H.

MINE DISORDER QUELLED; DEPUTY SHERIFF SLAIN

Harlan, Ky., April 19.—(AP)—The Harlan coal fields were quiet today after two days of disorder which resulted in the slaying of Jess Pace, deputy sheriff, and the arrest of 12 miners on charges of banding and confederating.

Four of the miners are held in connection with the beating of Charles Carpenter, employé of the Black Mountain Coal corporation at Evarts, Ky. Eight others are charged with participating in disorders at Evarts and Yancey, Ky.

William Burnett, 33, wounded by officers during the clash in which Pace was slain, was reported today to be recovering in a hospital. He is charged with firing the shot that killed the deputy.

Sheriff J. H. Blair said he expected no more trouble between his forces, including special deputized mine guards, and unemployed miners. The sheriff said, however, he was planning to take extra precautions during preliminary hearings tomorrow for the 12 miners under arrest.

fore the palace of the infanta, whom they remembered as a fat, laughing Bourbon, loved, not for her charities but for her gayety. Up to a year ago she never missed a party, show or concert. She never went to bed until 4 o'clock in the morning, and ran her ladies-in-waiting ragged.

Many wept as she was carried onto the train. Twenty aristocrats wept, and so did the thousands of humble folk. She was carried barely conscious onto the train taking her for the second time into exile. She left in 1868 with her mother, Isabel II., but came back.

The train moved out in silence. The duke of Saragossa, who was driving the locomotive, said he would not try to keep schedule.

As the day went into night Spain's baby republic counted eleven nations which have recognized it. They are France, Mexico, Portugal, Uruguay, Cuba, Chile, Argentina, Turkey, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, and Greece.

Urge Alfonso to Quit Paris.

PARIS, April 19.—(AP)—Desiring to avoid possible complications, French police are understood to have invited the duke of Toledo, formerly Alfonso XIII. of Spain, to retire with his suite from Paris if he intends to remain in France.

It was pointed out that France cannot prevent fanatics from crossing the frontier and attacking the royal visitors. It is hinted the cabinet discussed the problem of the exiled king's safety last night and a police official later visited the duke of Miranda, Alfonso's chamberlain.

The former monarch was unofficially reported to be planning to seek refuge at a Fontainebleau hotel tomorrow or Tuesday. The police attitude is that he could be better protected against a possible attack in some smaller locality. The manager of the Hotel Meurice, where the king is staying here, conferred last night with representatives of the Hotel Angleterre at Fontainebleau.

Visit to Chateau a Blind.

Alfonso's visit to a Fontainebleau chateau yesterday was understood to have been a blind for his inspection of the hotel, which is one of the most expensive of French provincial hotels.

The press "dropped" the duke of Toledo today, some newspapers not mentioning his name and others printing only a few lines. The duke went for a short automobile ride after mass was said in his apartment by a priest of his suite. Other members of the royal family also went motoring after having luncheon with English relatives. Gen. Weygand, commander in chief of the French army, today paid respects to Alfonso by signing his register at the hotel.

BRITISH WARSHIPS READY TO PROTECT SUBJECTS AT TANGIER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GIBRALTAR, April 19.—Troop and naval movements here are believed to be concerned with developments in Spanish Morocco and the safety of British subjects in the neighboring international zone at Tangier.

The British destroyers Tourmaline and Shamrock and two companies of troops were yesterday given a two hour notice to move under sealed orders. After a skirmish in Tetuan, resulting in several casualties, Gen. Wordana, high commissioner for Spanish Morocco, was dismissed. He fled for safety to Gibraltar.

Girl, 4, Dies of Burns; Clothes Ignited by Bonfire

Irene Tarasiewicz, 4 years old, 3355 South Racine avenue, died yesterday in the county hospital of burns received a week ago when a bonfire ignited her dress. The girl was playing near a bonfire in the rear of her home when her clothing caught fire. Her mother was unable to beat out the flames before the child suffered severe burns.

CHINESE BANDITS RECEIVE RANSOM; FREE U. S. CLERICS

Two Missionaries Win Their Release.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEIPING, China, April 19.—The American legation here tonight received a telegram from Capt. William Mayer of the American field artillery, stating that the Rev. Allie Godfrey Lindholm of Ortonville, Minn., attached to the Scandinavian alliance mission at Kalgan, had been released by Chinese bandits on the payment of $2,500 ransom.

The missionary was captured last Thursday. Capt. Mayer was dispatched to negotiate the Rev. Mr. Lindholm's release after his capture.

Miss Esther Nordland, 5255 North Sawyer avenue, Chicago, has been captured by communists in Hupeh province.

St. Paul Missionary Freed.

HANKOW, Hupeh Province, April 19.—(AP)—The Rev. K. N. Tvedt of St. Paul, Minn., American Lutheran United Mission missionary, held captive by Chinese communists near Hwangan, northern Hupeh, since last Oct. 17, was released today on payment of ransom by the mission. The Lutheran mission home here was advised the Rev. Mr. Tvedt had arrived at Sungan, south of Hwangan.

Albert Nelson of Minneapolis, another Lutheran missionary, captured at Hwangan, Honan province, last Oct. 17, and detained at Hwangan with Tvedt, is still held, his captors demanding ransom of $10,000 Mexican.

Wife in China.

The mission paid $10,000 Mexican, plus $5,000 worth of medical supplies, for Tvedt's release. Tvedt, who was captured by the Reds at Loshan, Honan province, came to China in 1914 after graduating from the Lutheran seminary at St. Paul, mission headquarters of which are in Minneapolis. Mrs. Tvedt, who is from Lanesboro, Minn., is here now.

The captivity of Tvedt and Nelson caused repeated formal protests by the United States government to the Nationalist government at Nanking. When the Chinese foreign office sought their releases, however, it found the communist bands too well organized and its efforts proved futile. It is a standing rule that missions do not ransom their representatives, but it is being modified in the cases of Tvedt and Nelson, at the request of American officials, following receipt of reports the two men were being tortured by their captors.

FIRE DESTROYS 2 STEAMSHIPS; THIRD DAMAGED

Wilmington, Del., April 19.—(AP)—Two steamships were destroyed and another ship and a barge were damaged late today in a fire at the foot of 4th street, on the Christiana river.

The passenger steamer City of Washington of the Wilson line and the small freighter West River were burned to the water line. The State of Delaware, a sister ship of the City of Washington, was damaged. The damaged barge was laden with skins consigned to a morocco plant. Estimates of the damage varied from $200,000 to $400,000. The City of Washington and the State of Delaware ply between Wilmington and Philadelphia.

A member of the crew of the West River expressed the belief the fire had been caused by an explosion in the acid cargo of the West River.

an automobile, which, it is alleged, is owned by Hufnagle. Mrs. Drill was driven to a spot twenty miles outside of New York and transferred to Peterson's machine. The motor trip back to St. Paul then began. Twice, en route, up to La Porte, Mrs. Drill wrote messages for help in hotel rooms. The third was successful.

So far as could be learned, the kidnaping was prompted by Drill's desire for a reconciliation with his wife. They were married while students at the University of Minnesota. Mrs. Drill obtained an annulment, and Drill, according to a newspaper clipping dated in 1929, attempted suicide. A reunion resulted and the couple was remarried at Mason City, Ia. Since then a second estrangement developed and Mrs. Drill, it is said, has negotiated for a second annulment.

Denies He Kidnaped Wife.

Mrs. Drill refused to talk to interviewers tonight, but Drill told his story. He first telephoned his father, Frank Drill, an attorney in St. Paul, and was advised to fight extradition before Gov. La Follette. This advice came on the heels of a wire demand from New York to hold Drill on a kidnaping charge.

"We didn't kidnap my wife," he protested. "She came voluntarily. We forced her into our car in New York and she yelled a little. Later we drove up Riverside drive, and she and I talked alone. She agreed to come with me to live in Portland, Ore. She stipulated that I was to sign waivers of claim to her property. At Poughkeepsie, N. Y., we had a quarrel in our hotel. I started to leave after telling her to go back, but she called me back. She says I carried a gun. That's not true. All I know is I have sought her for nine months, and only last January looked for her in New York."

G. O. P. CLUB REPORT URGES ROOSEVELT TO OUST MAYOR WALKER

New York, April 19.—[Special.]—Mayor James J. Walker was subjected to an attack from a new quarter today when the city affairs committee of the National Republican club, in its annual report, called for his removal by Gov. Roosevelt as the only real remedy for the "breakdown and demoralization of the city government."

The report, which was made public by Alan Fox, chairman of the committee and one of the original supporters of President Hoover in this state, will be presented to the club at its annual meeting Tuesday night.

The report suggests revision of the city charter as a secondary remedy and predicts further revelations of scandal in city departments by the Hofstadter legislative committee.

While this new attack was being made on the mayor he was putting the finishing touches to his letter to Gov. Roosevelt, answering formal charges brought against him by the city affairs committee. The mayor's answer, it is expected, will be delivered by messenger to the governor tomorrow and may be made public in the afternoon.

HORSE CAR RIDE OPENS ST. RITA'S CHURCH JUBILEE

Twenty-five years ago the Very Rev. James F. Green boarded a horse drawn street car at 63d street and Damen avenue and traveled west through a sparsely settled section of the city to Oakley avenue. At the latter point he was to build the St. Rita's High school, while at Washtenaw avenue he was to erect St. Rita's Catholic church.

Yesterday Father Green, together with surviving members of the seven original families of St. Rita's church, boarded a similar street car at the same starting point. On arriving at Oakley avenue, after retracing the original journey, the founder and builder of St. Rita's, was greeted by hundreds of school children of St. Rita's elementary and high schools and by thousands of persons assembled to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the parish.

The principal speaker yesterday was former Congressman George Gorman. The festivities of the anniversary will continue through the week.

CITY'S JUBILEE TO DRAW WORLD THRONG TO CITY

Col. Randolph and others who are working for the event."

These sentiments were expressive of those of other merchant chiefs. All have promised to coördinate their facilities and show a rousing time not only to native Chicagoans but to thousands of visitors.

The Lincoln park, west park, and south park boards last night signified their intentions of contributing to the occasion. They will decorate their park districts especially for the jubilee, they said. By May 11 all the city parks will be in full summery splendor, they believed, and give out of town visitors a glimpse of what has made Chicago notable for its parks.

Prepare for Rush of Visitors.

Railroads, theaters, hotels, and other agencies which serve the general public are already preparing for an enrush of visitors. The Chicago Beautiful Plan commission will also add its efforts to the week. The World's Fair commission will lend a hand, and it is possible, Col. Randolph said last night, that the Fort Dearborn replica on the fair grounds will be opened to the public May 17.

The Chicago Jubilee will be chock full of attractions, one of them the mammoth parade. State street store windows will be especially decorated. Living models will replace the inanimate ones. All the stores will strive to make visitors feel at home and impress them with the merits of Chicago.

Airplane, automobile, and motorboat companies have enrolled in the jubilee. The Chicago Federation of Musicians, under the leadership of President James C. Petrillo, will furnish music. Choral singing will also be featured. Throughout, however, and above the carnival spirit of gayety, will be the theme of Chicago's progressive greatness, for which, among other things, her domestic products will speak.

CHILDREN WILL WIELD BROOMS IN CLEANUP WEEK

Cleanup week, which begins today under the sponsorship of the Chicago Association of Commerce, will be featured by a special celebration centering about the Whitney school, 2815 South Komensky avenue. The campaign is aimed to dress up Chicago, clean its streets and alleys, and improve grounds and buildings.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon more than 1,000 children in costume, many of them carrying shovels, brooms and banners, will parade, starting at 29th street and Kedvale avenue. Twenty floats and 50 cars will participate. There will also be bands. The Whitney school has been selected to develop itself into a model district.

RESERVE BOARD FINDS INCREASE IN PAY ROLLS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 19.—[Special.]—The output of the important industries increased more than seasonally in February, according to the bulletin of the federal reserve board, issued today.

Although factory employment advanced at a less rapid rate, the value of wage payments at factories rose by more than the usual seasonal amount. The general level of commodity prices continued to decline. Industrial production as measured by the federal reserve board's index, which is adjusted to allow for seasonal variation, increased by 4 per cent in February from the low level prevailing in December and January. On the basis of the average for 1923-'25 as 100, the volume of production in February was 85, compared with 82 for the two preceding months and 107 for February of last year.

Output of Autos Increases.

At steel mills activity increased considerably and the output of automobiles advanced by somewhat more than the usual seasonal amount. The output of shoe factories and textile mills increased substantially, while the output of coal continued to decline. During the first half of March activity at steel mills continued to increase.

"The value of building contracts awarded in February was slightly larger than in January, according to the F. W. Dodge corporation," the bulletin stated. "An increase in residential building was accompanied by a decrease in contracts for public works and utilities, while awards for factories and commercial buildings continued in small volume. In the first half of March there was an increase in the daily average of contracts awarded, as is usual at this season.

Factory Pay Rolls Increase.

"Factory employment increased slightly less than usual in February, while factory pay rolls increased by more than the seasonal amount from the low level of January. In many industries the rate of increase in pay rolls was about the same as February of other recent years, but in the automobile, shoe, woolen goods, and clothing industries the rate of increase was larger than usual."

ALDERMEN REST IN DIXIE FROM CHICAGO CARES

Miami Beach, Fla., April 19.—[Special.]—Members of the committee on committees rested today from the task of assigning the fifty Chicago aldermen, including themselves, to membership on the council committees that will handle the city's business for the next two years. The committee has been here a week, working on the committee slates while vacationing.

Tentative agreements have been reached on the membership of a number of committees, but no definite understanding has been reached on filling the five vacant chairmanships. The only exception is that at the insistence of Ald. Sheldon W. Govier [9th], member of the steering group, it has practically been settled that Ald. William A. Rowan [10th] will head the committee on harbors, wharves and bridges.

Another action taken by the committee was to eliminate Ald. Louis B. Anderson [2d] from the finance committee and give the vacancy to Ald. John J. Coughlin [1st]. Each committee tentatively has more members now than during the last two years, and tomorrow the aldermen will start to pare the committees down to the proper size.

THE INCOME TAX BILL.

By the provisions of the Lantz income tax bill, which has passed the state senate, every penny collected under it will go to Springfield. The tax is intended to serve as a substitute for the state's revenues derived from property taxes.

The average tax rate in Chicago is about $6 per $100 of assessed valuation. The state's share of the $6 is 30 cents. All that property owners in Chicago can expect in relief as a result of the income tax bill, therefore, is a reduction of something like 7 per cent in their present tax bills. The man whose taxes now amount to $100 would pay $93 if the bill passes. That saving in almost every case would be wholly overbalanced by the income tax he would have to pay. Even in the lowest bracket, where the tax is to be only 1 per cent of net income, the net income would have to be only $700 to wipe out any saving. In the intermediate and higher brackets the additional cost would be startling.

Of course, it is not the purpose of the tax to relieve taxpayers in the cities. It is intended as an opening wedge toward passing on to the cities the costs of local government downstate. When the principle of using the income tax to fill the state treasury has been accepted the next move will be to transfer additional charges to the state treasury. Already it has been proposed that the state pay the salaries of county judges. If judges, why not sheriffs? And if sheriffs, why not schools? And if schools, why not rural roads?

The downstate members of the legislature who have broken their solemn oaths in order to retain control of the legislature have done so with a purpose, the purpose being to rob the taxpayers of the cities for the benefit of the squires downstate. The progress of the Lantz bill is unmistakable evidence of the design. Every vote for it was a downstate vote. Every vote against it, save one, was a Cook county vote.

Many Chicago property owners are eager for an income tax. They regard it as the only hope of substantial relief from their present crushing burdens. There is much to be said for an income tax in principle, but the bill now in the legislature could only add to the tax bills of city dwellers and city property owners. As long as the legislature is apportioned as it is at present it may be taken as axiomatic that any income tax bill will be at the expense of Chicago. That will be its purpose and its result if enacted.

THE KINGS.

A reader thinks that the events in Spain with a runaway king out of one door and a disconsolate queen settling the family out of another would give point to a republication of the old TRIBUNE editorial on the kings of Europe prompted by the beginning of the world war. So the bit of prophecy is reprinted below.

That 1914 view of the inherent malevolence of the monarchical institution, of its blundering, medieval egotisms to which peoples were exposed, was justified in a large measure by the subsequent behavior of the kings and the disposition made of them by their suddenly animated subjects.

Kingship once had implied physical responsibility at the head of the country's armed levies. It was so understood when Harold stood at Hastings [note for the precisian—at Senlac] and when Gustav fell at Lutzen, but noblesse oblige, although not gone completely from the higher spirited nobility, was lost among the crowns. William III. of Orange and Great Britain was the last of the great fighting kings, although George II. must be credited with spirit and battlefield appearances. The recent kaiser did not expose even a son in the crash of German arms and disaster found him on the wing for Holland and refuge. Nothing majestic appeared on the royal scene. Puffy little caricatures of war lords came in for the celebration of triumphs and fled before the portent of defeat.

They had been worthless for the preservation of peace and for the prosecution of war. The spectacle was equally humiliating and exasperating to the most infatuated of the peoples and the crowns popped off in the gale. With the Hohenzollerns and Hapsburgs it became in large measure a comedy of decline and fall; with the Romanoffs a tragedy. It is true that Russia and also Italy went into autocracies, and that Poland won its freedom only to find a dictatorship. Republicanism remains too heady a wine for some European temperaments, but the German republic seems to have a rock for its foundation.

Alfonso, scampering in the regal fashion which has been the mode since the days of his majestic puerility, James II., is a hero in France [a fact to be remembered the next time Marie of Rumania sets the American democracy on its ear], but his heroism consisted in making his getaway a highly personal affair with his queen and his children abandoned to their own resources.

The royal motto of Europe is and has been "Safety First."

PACIFISM AND PANIC FOR NICARAGUA.

Americans are coming out of the interior of Nicaragua with good reasons for hurrying. Word has been sent to them that their government cannot undertake to protect them. This is the decision of the state department, and Mr. Stimson's warning has been forwarded through the consular officers. The United States has submitted to the threat of the recent bandit raids. Others than Americans are endangered, a number of British subjects being exposed.

"Americans remain in Nicaragua at their own risk," was the message sent out by the consul at Bluefields, "and must not expect protection from American forces."

The most famous precedent for such an order was a similar one of Bryan when, as secretary of state under President Wilson, he informed Americans that they were in Mexico at their own risk, that the government would not protect them and that they should get out. This affected numerous citizens who had made investments, many of them small ones in farm land, under Mexican laws and in reliance on the responsibility of their own government and the Mexican. Before Mr. Bryan's policy had gathered all its fruit the United States was in a war of fact if not of theory with Mexico, was engaged with its fleet, and had what it called its army either on the border or deep in Mexican territory in futile expeditions which even now are shameful in the memory. Nearly every possible abuse which pacifism could make of military force was made and the consequences destroyed respect for the United States south of the Rio Grande for a decade.

In Nicaragua the conditions, in a way, are unlike those encountered in Mexico. In the former land the United States has assumed direct responsibility for government. It has fought Sandino. It has backed the present existing authority. It has policed the country with marines, declared that peace and order should exist, and has endeavored to train a native constabulary sufficient for protection. Americans who are in Nicaragua accepted these conditions. So also did the British and the subjects of other countries.

President Hoover and Mr. Stimson may be recognizing a fact in saying that the American forces cannot protect foreigners if they go into all parts of a bandit infested country, but another conclusion is justified by the state department messages and by what has been made known of the American government intent. That conclusion is that the administration does not propose to continue any sort of responsibility for Nicaragua; that it drops the matter and that the marines come out.

Pacifist organizations which have successfully invaded politics will compliment the administration on this decision. The United States will concede that its former policy was quite mistaken and that its hands never should have been laid on Nicaragua, even in the hope that the general purposes of humanity would be served. The British government, when British subjects have suffered from disorders and violence, will probably concede the right of the Americans to abandon the scene. It will probably also insist on its own right to extend protection where it is needed.

Mr. Stimson is probably prepared to agree to the landing of British marines to take the place of the withdrawn American forces. A British squadron protected Americans in Tampico when Mr. Bryan surrendered the responsibility. Americans who cannot get out of Nicaragua may again rely on the British flag for the guaranties refused under their own.

Editorial of the Day

THE TWILIGHT OF THE KINGS.

Before establishing hell on earth the pietistic kings commend their subjects to God. Seek the Lord's sanction for the devil's work.

"And now I commend you to God," said the kaiser from his balcony to the people in the street. "Go to church and kneel before God and pray for his help for our gallant army."

Pray that a farmer dragged from a Saxon field shall be speedier with a bayonet thrust than a winemaker taken from his vines in the Aube; that a Berlin lawyer shall be steadier with the rifle than a Moscow merchant; that a machine gun manned by Heidelberg students shall not jam and that one worked by Paris carpenters shall.

Pray that a Bavarian hop grower, armed in a quarrel in which he has no heart, shall outmarch a wheat grower from Poltava; that Cossacks from the Don shall be lured into barbed wire entanglements and caught by masked guns; that an innkeeper from Salzburg shall blow the head off a baker from the Loire.

"Go to church and pray for help"—that the hell shall be hotter in innocent Ardennes than it is in equally innocent Hessen; that it shall be hotter in innocent Kovno than in equally innocent Posen.

And the pietistic czar commends his subjects to God that they may have strength of arm in a quarrel they do not understand; that they may inflict more suffering than they are required to endure and the name of Romanoff be greater than the name of Hohenzollern, that it may be greater than the name of Hapsburg, that its territories shall be wider and the territories of Hohenzollern and the territories of Hapsburg less.

The pietistic emperor of Austria commends his subjects to God, to seek divine assistance to crush the peasants of Serbia, dragged from the wheat field when it was ready for the scythe and given to the scythe themselves.

This is, we think, the last call of monarchy upon divinity when Asmodeus walks in armor. The kings worship Baal and call it God, but out of the sacrifice will come, we think, a resolution firmly taken to have no more wheat growers and growers of corn, makers of wine, miners and fishers, artisans and traders, sailors and storekeepers offered up with prayer to the Almighty in a feudal slaughter, armed against each other without hate and without cause they know, or, if they know, would give a penny which way it was determined.

This is the twilight of the kings. Western Europe of the people may be caught in this debacle, but never again. Eastern Europe of the kings will be remade and the name of God shall not give grace to a hundred square miles of broken bodies.

NEW SLANT ON FINICKY EATERS.

If a child is a finicky eater the parent should not urge food on him, nor pick on him, and, above all, should not punish him or bribe him. One good plan is to set him at the table with several other children and let nature take its course.

Drs. Lucas and Pryor suggest another plan. Before the child is sent to the table with other children, as a school of instruction, they advise that the parents strip him to the buff and size him up. If they know how to do it they advise that he be measured. This means measuring the girth of the abdomen at three levels, that of the chest, the breadth of the shoulders, the length of the trunk, and the legs.

The object of all this is to determine whether the child is of linear build or of a lateral build, or if he is in between. Many children are of the linear build, meaning that they are tall and narrow. Many others are of the lateral build, meaning that they are short and broad. Many conform to neither type.

The narrow children are not necessarily tall, though most of them are; and not all those of lateral build are short. The linears are apt to be long legged, with long chests. Their abdomens do not protrude. We say of their trunks that they are hour glass in shape, whereas the other group have trunks that are barrel shaped.

In judging by the shape of the abdomen we should not forget that the build of the back has much to do with the contour of the abdomen. A sway-backed child will have a protruding abdomen, regardless of his other architectural specifications.

What significance has all of this? What it means in the way of dieting a finicky child will be saved for tomorrow's story. What space is left in this story will be given to other meanings of body build. These tall, narrow children are apt to grow into adults with dropped stomach and other fallen, displaced organs. Fallen organs do very little harm so far as actual disease is concerned, but they do much to take the joy out of life. Among them are most of the low blood pressure, and such people have a multitude of symptoms. Here is the recruiting ground for neurasthenics. Many low blood pressure subjects digest starchy foods poorly. There is a line of diseases to which they are quite subject. One is ulcer of the stomach.

They are self-cantered and that frequently means that they are badly poised emotionally and maybe unhappy at home and in society. Some of them develop dementia præcox.

ECZEMA.

J. S. J. writes:

1. What is the difference between fiery eczema and weeping eczema?
2. What causes eczema?
3. What is the best treatment for fiery eczema? I mean the kind that burns and itches until it nearly drives you crazy, but no pus.

REPLY.

1. "Fiery eczema" is a term that is applied to a chronic inflammation of the skin, accompanied by considerable redness and itching. In weeping eczema there is oozing of fluid and oftentimes formation of crusts.
2. Eczema is a group of skin disorders with little in common. Some have one cause, some another. An eczema such as you describe is liable to be due to poisoning of the skin by some chemical, or possibly to a diet to which you are sensitized.
3. If you will find the cause and avoid it you need do nothing else by way of treatment.

LOOK FOR DRY PLACE.

C. S. writes: I am planning to go to California to live. I am suffering with asthma and general catarrh of the head. Could you tell me what part of California would be best for me? I know Arizona would be better, but I have some personal reasons for wanting to locate in California.

REPLY.

Assuming your trouble be limited to so-called catarrh [probably antrum infection] and a secondary asthma, locate in some dry place in southern California. Probably Imperial valley would be best. Around Barstow should be good. So should Fresno and the valleys of that section. Locate east of the coast mountains.

DEPENDS UPON FACTS.

Chicago, April 16.—[Friend of the People.]—I was born in Latvia; came to the United States in February, 1924, at the age of 19 by deserting a Holland vessel in Baltimore. Went through physical and immigration examination. After that I sailed three different seasons under the United States flag on the great lakes. I have always worked and am well liked by everybody. Never had any kind of trouble. May I become a citizen?

If the writer was admitted to the United States by passing the immigration inspectors after his desertion from the ship, he is entitled to apply for naturalization.

CONTRACT PROBABLY AUTHORIZES IT.

Chicago, April 10.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—"A" sells "B" [a speculator] a farm on time payments. "B" leases to "C," lease providing that "B" furnish "C" another place if farm is sold. "B" defaults. 1. Can "A" collect rent from "C"? 2. What procedure is necessary to remove "C" if he fails or refuses to pay? 3. What procedure is necessary in this state for "A" to recover possession? Contract reads "A," upon his option, can re-enter and take possession when default of any of the provisions of the contract occur.

Q. E. D.

1. It seems probable that the contract is so worded that "A" can default "B" and collect reasonable rent from "C."
2. Employ an attorney.
3. Same.

PAY IN FULL.

Chicago, April 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am in debt to a man for the last year. I want to pay this bill but am afraid he will stop my wages as soon as he finds I am working. I would like to know if I give him a dollar or more a week or month, can he sue me just the same?

J. S.

Yes, he can. No payment of less than the full amount due will protect you.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF.

The fall of Alfonso XIII., the last of a long line of Bourbon kings, reminds us of Gila Monster Bill. For Gila Monster Bill found out that Bourbon kings could fall off a table or a throne just as easily as any common mortal could.

It was in Manchuria during the Jappo-Russian war. Gila Monster Bill was so called, not because he had a face like a Gila Monster, although as a matter of fact there was a remarkable resemblance, but because he was always bragging that Gila Monsters could bite him and it never hurt him. It was the same with rattlesnakes or any poisonous reptile, but Gila Monster appealed so to the imagination of those privileged to hear Bill's exciting tales of the great west that it stuck and gave Bill his name.

Bill was a cowboy in Colorado, Texas, and other points west when the government fastened on him and took him out to the Philippines at the time of the misunderstanding there between Aguinaldo and the United States of America. The campaign had got to the point where Aggie had taken to the mountains and the troops would have to go there after him. It was too rough for wheeled things and so the army arranged to pack its grub on mules by the intricate and involved method known as the diamond hitch. But, while West Point teaches grand tactics, strategy, and how to shoot a cannon so that the ball will turn at right angles and go around a hill, it doesn't instruct its military marvels how to throw a diamond hitch. So the army had to hunt around in the west and pick up a lot of cowboys who were diamond hitch experts. That's where Gila Monster Bill came in.

After Aggie was captured the necessity of mules, packs, and diamond hitches dwindled down to almost nothing, and Gila Monster Bill drifted up the Asiatic coast to Manchuria, where a genuine, first class, A1 war was in progress. He got a job with the Russian army buying beef on the hoof for about 10 rubles a beef and selling it to the Russian army for 20 rubles a hoof. And Bill grew exceedingly rich.

I met the Gila Monster person one day in Moukden. I had known him in the Philippines and the reunion in far off Manchuria was a joyous affair. I invited him to come to our house that night to a birthday party, probably the czar's—everybody in Moukden was giving or going to give birthday parties to the czar. I told Bill that quite a number of Russian generals, dukes, princes, barons, and things like that would be there, and, most important of all, Prince Jaime de Bourbon of Spain, Carlist pretender to the Spanish throne and claimant to the French crown.

"Not me," said Bill. "I'm jest a lone cowboy; I sleep in my clothes, wear my boots and spurs to bed, eat pie with a knife, an' I hain't never been brung up to sashay 'roun' with kings an' dookes an' big bugs like that. Thank you very kindly, but I'll stay down here an' play fan tan with the Chinks an' git all their money an' also drink a lot of good likker."

I told Bill there would be plenty of chances to lose his money at our party if he wanted to gamble, and that something told me there would be plenty of likker. After begging Bill for an hour he finally said he would come. And he did; but it was very late when he came in, blushing like a school girl. He was so frightened when he shook hands with Prince Jaime de Bourbon he almost fainted. But he was introduced all around and offered strong drink, and after a little he braced up and managed to say a word now and then when any one spoke to him.

I had to leave the merry party to go to the cable station, three or four miles away, to send a dispatch. All the way I worried about my bashful, lone cowboy, surrounded by nobility and gilded generals. He would be so embarrassed that finally, I concluded, he would jump out of a window and not stop running until he reached the coast.

As I returned to the house there was the sound of merry shouts and much laughter from within, and then the sound of a heavy fall. Just at that moment the door opened and Gila Monster Bill reeled out.

"Hello, Bill!" I shouted, "what's the matter in there?"

"Oh, nuthin'," said Bill, calmly, "jest one o' them damn kings has fell off the table agin."

EPITAPH FOR A GOOD GIRL.

A man named Ficke knew a girl
Like me, and wrote her epitaph.
Because of it, I changed my ways
And saved, they say, the wheat from chaff.

And now I wonder, did she die
Or did she live and change her ways
Like me and changeless, pace and go
Across the graveyard of her days?

I think she lived and left, instead,
Her youth and all her darling sins
And found that when one buries youth
A ready epitaph begins.

It may be best; but now I know
That all the keenest edge is dull.
And if my life is now so good,
By God! It once was beautiful.

CAROLA.

SCRIBNER'S FOR MAY has an article by George Seldes, "Twilight of the Dictators," in which he shows up most mercilessly the rule of Mussolini and ends his chapter regarding Italy by saying: "Murder or suicide, that is, foreign war or bankruptcy, is the common fate of dictatorships, and Fascism faces both." Oh, Scribner's Magazine! Oh, George Seldes! Remember what happened to Smedley D. Butler, the gallant marine? Wait until Mussolini reads that story. My goodness, it's going to be something with boiling oil in it! You see.

LAGNIAPPE.

MODERN COLLEGE LIFE has been charged with undermining the health of students and sending out into the world run down men and women. We don't know about the gels, but what's wearing the life out of the boys is having to walk around under those tent-sized fur overcoats all winter and most of the spring.

WHENEVER THERE'S A WRECK

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 20, 1915.

ROME.—The Austrian and German ambassadors have completed preparations for departure from Rome at a moment's notice. It is believed war with Italy is imminent.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Seven Republicans, three Progressives, and two Democrats constitute the jury in William Barnes' $50,000 libel suit against Col. Theodore Roosevelt. They will determine if Col. Roosevelt, in a published statement last July to the effect that Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy were the invisible government that made a national alliance between crooked business and crooked politics, meant to say that Mr. Barnes was personally corrupt or was merely whacking at bad government.

CHICAGO. — Mediation, the first step toward arbitrating the strike of 16,000 carpenters which halted building operations involving $30,000,000 and threw 125,000 other craftsmen out of work, was put up to the carpenter contractors' association yesterday. This action came when the arbitration committee of the carpenters' district council formally accepted the offer of the state board of arbitration to act as mediators.

APRIL 20, 1901.

CHICAGO.—Alarmed by the encroachment of basket flower dealers who line State street from Washington street to Van Buren street, the Chicago florists have signed a petition to the city council asking legislation which will compel all street dealers in the downtown district to keep moving. An ordinance is being drawn for presentation prohibiting the licensing of any persons who may require space on the downtown sidewalks for the sale of flowers, fruit, or cheap jewelry.

MANILA.—Aguinaldo's long expected manifesto to the Filipino people announcing his acceptance of American sovereignty and advising them to follow his example was issued today. Gov. Gen. MacArthur signalized the issuance of the manifesto by releasing and returning to their homes 1,000 Filipino prisoners, all of whom took the oath of allegiance to the United States.

LONDON.—Fourteen pages of today's official Gazette are filled with a list of honors conferred upon officers of the British army for services in the Boer war. Among those made knights commander of the Order of the Bath are Gens. Pole-Carew, Methuen, Tucker, Ian Hamilton, Hector MacDonald, French, Knox, and Braybant.

APRIL 20, 1881.

LONDON.—Lord Beaconsfield [Benjamin Disraeli], who died early this morning, will be buried beside his wife in the graveyard of the parish church at Hughenden Manor. It is understood that this was his earnest wish. Queen Victoria and the people would be glad to honor him with a grave in Westminster abbey. The evening editions of the Standard and the Globe appeared in mourning. The queen published the following court circular: "The queen received with feelings of deepest sorrow the news of the death of Lord Beaconsfield, in whom her majesty loses a most valued friend and counselor and the nation one of its most distinguished statesmen."

EDITORIAL.—At the ripe age of nearly 77 years, Benjamin Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield, died in London on April 19. He died in the zenith of what he counted the climax of earthly glory. He had lived to enjoy all the social, political and literary fame to which even in his humblest days he imagined might fall to the lot of even a man of his bounding ambition. His life was one of great activity. He was born of a race which at that time—and even down to this day—was under the great ban of political and social ostracism. Though his father renounced Judaism and the boy was delivered over to the Christians to be baptized, and was baptized, the reproach of race was never lost sight of, and in the terms of vilification which followed him through life references to the religion of his ancestors were never forgotten or omitted. Mr. Disraeli was 45 years in public life. He was during that time a conspicuous man in British politics.

A VOTE LOST.

Chicago, April 17.—I have been a Republican all of my life. My father and grandfather were of the old school of Lincoln, Grant, Blaine, Garfield. Of late years I have been getting much disgusted with the type of G. O. P. leaders—cringing to the whip of that obnoxious Anti-Saloon outfit. I have cast my last vote for Mr. Emmerson for any office he may run for or for any other candidate on a ticket containing Emmerson's name.

J. A. B.

FOR THE VETO.

Chicago, April 16.—Many contributors to this column have stated that because of the veto Gov. Emmerson is done for politically and is deserving of it. Their logic must be that an honest man is undeserving of political office. If honesty was ever displayed it was in this case by Gov. Emmerson, who, well knowing that political factions would be disappointed by his action, stood there alone, not using the methods of the cautious politician, but holding his head high above the ballyhoo of petty politics and pointing to the constitution of the U. S. A. as supreme.

M. W. JOHNSON.

THE KING.

Chicago, Ill., April 15.—King Emmerson overrides the people in Illinois and the people depose King Alfonso in Spain.

Now the only thing that is necessary for the liberty loving people to do is to forget partisanship in 1932 in Illinois and unite upon men who will represent the people and put into effect the will of the people as repeatedly shown by referendums and make the result so emphatic that never again will a governor drunk with power attempt to set up his will as against the will expressed so often by the voters at the ballot box.

If elections mean nothing, if referendums mean nothing, if party platforms mean nothing, if pledges of candidates seeking the votes of the people mean nothing, then it is high time that the citizens were fully apprised of it so that they can take legal steps to clean house.

BERNARD MOULTON WIEDINGER.

ANOTHER CAT CAME BACK.

Chicago, April 7.—Can you imagine our surprise when we found our cat in her accustomed place under the porch? She returned three days ago. We lost her last summer in the vicinity of the Rocky mountains. She appears to be in fine condition, in spite of her long, arduous journey over the mountains. What's more—she brought her new family with her—five little tan kittens.

ANOTHER ONE.

LABORATORY DOGS.

Chicago, April 13.—I have read with a great deal of interest the editorial on vivisection in your columns today and wish to commend you highly on your stand. Only through newspaper work of this kind is the public informed of the rapid strides made in the field of medicine. I wish to thank you very sincerely for this timely editorial.

KARL A. MEYER,
Medical Superintendent, Cook County Hospital.

FOR A NATIONAL REFERENDUM.

Chicago, April 10.—Let both national committees agree to recommend that the next congress shall pass a law providing for a national referendum to be held next spring, in which each voter shall vote for one only of the following propositions:

[A.] The eighteenth amendment to remain as it is.

[B.] The eighteenth amendment to be absolutely repealed.

[C.] The eighteenth amendment to be amended to give the power of prohibition and regulation to congress.

[D.] The eighteenth amendment to be amended to give the power of prohibition and regulation to the several states, with the further provision that the federal government will back up any and every state voting prohibition or regulation, with all the federal government's powers.

If one of the propositions receives a majority then congress shall enact a law for fulfilling that decision.

If there be no majority then, at a run-off referendum [held within 6 months] let the two measures securing the highest number of votes be voted for, the result of the second vote being promptly carried through into law. If the two national committees cannot agree on the program whichever party next year adopts a platform carrying the plan should win hands down.

NEWELL C. KNIGHT.

JAY ALLEN.

Chicago, April 15.—You also have the world's greatest foreign correspondent in the person of Jay Allen, whose account of the birth of the Spanish republic in this morning's TRIBUNE is as complete and freshly colorful a description as I ever hope to read.

E. L. HOWE JR.

MUSIC IN DUBUQUE.

Dubuque, Ia., April 12.—And what of Dubuque, for 93 years Iowa's seat of culture and erudition? Dubuque not only boasts a symphony orchestra, a renowned conductor, and splendid musicians, but also a civic choral society, whose organizer and director is unusually competent.

Every year during Music week, Dubuque educates and elevates her people with a series of concerts that are an un-Babbitt-istic and Main Street-esque as it is possible to conceive in this the most pitiably maligned city in the country. And these programs are climaxed by an evening of choral music, in which participate the Civic Choral society, the massed Catholic choir, the massed Protestant choir, the Sangerbund chorus, the choirs and glee clubs of Columbia college, Clarke college, the University of Dubuque, and of Wartburg seminary, and finally, the union of all these organizations. The symphony accompanies. And the attendance of something like 5,000 Dubuquers at one such recital surely attests to the excellence of the performances, and perhaps also reveals and measures the tastes and proclivities of those citizens who do not sing.

SHREWD MOSLEYS CLING TO RICHES AS PARTY FLOPS

Won't Waste Leiter Millions in British Politics.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 19—"Will the millions of dollars left by the late Levi Z. Leiter of Chicago and that typical British aristocrat, the late Sir Oswald Mosley, be spent in building up a radical socialist party in England?"

This question was asked by an American, who has been watching the development of British politics.

The politicians answer by saying that these millions won't be used for any such purpose. Without in any way impugning the sincerity of Sir Oswald and Lady Cynthia Mosley, the heirs, it is fair to say that they are both too shrewd to spend their own fortune in promoting a party that the public does not want. If the public wants it, it will pay for it. Friends of the Mosleys declare it would be a waste of money for them to pay the bill.

Young Become Socialists

The Mosley revolt is particularly interesting to Americans because Lady Cynthia is the grand-daughter and one of the heiresses of Leiter estate. She is also the daughter of the late Marquis Curzon and is the wife of Sir Oswald Mosley, whose father, a great British landowner, was known far and wide as "John Bull" because of his typical "John Bullish" appearance and his old-fashioned Tory sentiments. When these two young people went socialist therefore, it was not only a political but a social sensation.

Young Sir Oswald began life as a Conservative. It is doubtful what his wife's politics were. At any rate she went Socialist with her husband. Mosley, Conservative member of parliament, "crossed the floor of the house" and was promptly rewarded with a minor office by Prime Minister MacDonald.

Unkind people say the office was too minor, for soon afterwards Mosley became one of the most acid critics of the Labor government. He complained they were not bringing in socialism fast enough and finally resigned office in the hope of gingering up the government. To his surprise nothing happened. The government went on in the same old way and the only thing left for Mosley was to form a new party. This he did under the name of "the new party." Weeks before he launched it political gossip was busy with the split he was going to cause in the Labor party.

Party Becomes a Flop.

The result was a flop. He took with him, besides his wife, who is also a member of parliament, Oliver Baldwin, the Socialist son of Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader; John Strachey, son of the late Tory editor of the Spectator, and C. Brown, a Labor member of parliament, who has been a civil servant. He also gained one recruit from the Conservatives in W. E. D. Allen, a rich young man, who sits for a northern constituency—and that is the new party.

Mosley's recruits are all from the middle and upper classes. When the aristocrat becomes a Socialist he adopts a deeper tinge than the actual working man, who knows a good deal more about conditions than the aristocrat. Mosley and his friends were "young men in a hurry" and the old fashioned trade unionists of the Labor party, who had struggled for office for years, were in no mood to give place to a "young upstart."

Another handicap for Mosley is that both he and his wife are to handsome. The rich Socialist wears the last word in clothes. Every hair on his head is plastered down in the right place. His neckties betray much thought and his spats gleam in the sunshine. It is difficult for hard shelled politicians to believe this faddist is a radical revolutionary. Lady Cynthia, too, is gowned to perfection and one can hardly imagine her leading a mob to destroy Buckingham palace.

Candidates Are Dwindling.

The Mosley movement started by announcing that it would run 400 candidates at the next election. Then the number came down to 150. Now it is 15, and politicians predict that when the election comes it will come down to the five existing members fighting to keep their seats.

It is interesting that in the two most provocative cases of political revolt in the British parliament, the leading figures have an American connection—Mosley through his wife, and Churchill through his mother, who was Jenny Jerome of New York.

Churchill at the moment is high and dry having landed there by his own clumsiness in tactics. He took the stump against the policy of the conservative party on India, which is to support the labor government's policy of conciliation. Churchill wanted a "strong hand" policy. He resigned from Baldwin's shadow cabinet but expressed the hope to lead the conservative opposition against the labor party's budget. Baldwin appointed Neville Chamberlain to lead this opposition and this means that if the Tories come into power after the next election Chamberlain, not Churchill, will become chancellor of the exchequer.

SEA BATHING IN NUDE LAWFUL OUT WEST IF YOU GO IN AT NIGHT

Santa Barbara, Cal., April 19.—(AP)—It is lawful to take a dip in the Pacific ocean from Santa Barbara's broad sands, sans all clothing, providing the plunge is taken between the hours of 8 p. m. and 6 a. m.

Chief of Police George Sloan admitted the legality of the act today. He added that fifty year old ordinance was the authority for his ruling.

But, the chief also said in no uncertain terms, three or four more days probably would see the end of the present situation. He planned to go before the city council tomorrow and demand a revision of the ordinance of 1881.

The ancient ordinance was politely called to Chief Sloan's attention yesterday by persons whose identity he did not reveal.

It was after a report had been received that young women were playing in the water at night without any bathing suits in evidence as an occasional automobile headlight flashed their way that the ordinance was called to Chief Sloan's attention.

WIFE DIES AS 2D VICTIM OF HUSBAND'S GUN

Mrs. Lillian Heyden, 35 years old, 1322 South Harvey avenue, Berwyn, died yesterday in the Berwyn hospital of wounds suffered when her estranged husband, Charles, 40 years old, shot her last Friday night after accusing her of indiscretions with David Schechtman, 33 years old, an insurance agent of 3857 Grenshaw street, whom he also killed.

Schechtman, also married, died Saturday morning. After shooting his wife, Heyden had gone hunting for the insurance agent and surprised him as he left a drug store at Roosevelt road and Springfield avenue. Heyden fled in an automobile, which was later found abandoned in Lyons.

Suspecting he might have committed suicide, the police yesterday searched Salt creek and the abandoned Kennel club grounds in Lyons, but found no body. Heyden had written his father a note saying "goodby," but has also written his sister that he was "okeh."

Russia Bars Canadian Imports as Retaliation

MOSCOW, April 19.—(AP)—Rosengoiz, people's commissar for foreign trade, issued an order today forbidding all soviet importing organizations and trade representatives abroad to buy any Canadian goods or use Canadian shipping. The order was in response to the Canadian government's embargo against soviet made goods.

Husband Asks Police Hunt for Missing Wife

The police have been asked to search for Mrs. Ann Hurn, 39 years old, 5709 Harper avenue, who left her home on Friday morning and failed to return. According to her husband, Harold Hurn, she wore a tan spring coat and a black hat when she left. Hurn expressed the opinion that his wife had suffered a lapse of memory. Several months ago Mrs. Hurn suffered a nervous breakdown.

Guard Italian Embassy as Belgian Professor Vanishes

BRUSSELS, April 19.—(AP)—Belgian police were guarding the Italian embassy here today. A group of university students voted a resolution asking the government to make a complete investigation into the disappearance at Milan, Italy, of Leo Moulin, Brussels professor. The students alleged Prof. Moulin had been the victim of a "political kidnaping."

. . . and this is just a part of what you get in the

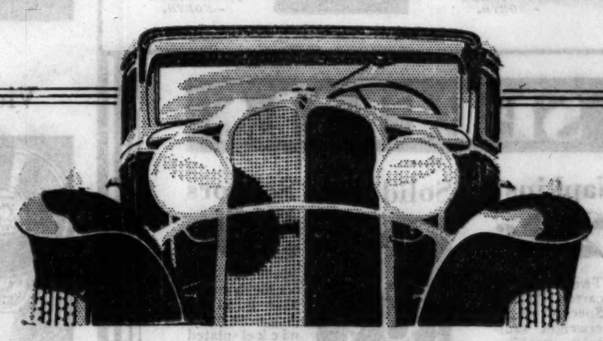
$981 DELIVERED EQUIPPED
THIS IS THE PRICE OF THE TWO-DOOR SEDAN OR COUPE, equipped and delivered in Chicago. Sport Coupe, $1,061. Four-door Sedan or Convertible Coupe, $1,081. Custom Sedan, $1,141. All cars equipped with front and rear bumpers, shock absorbers, 5 wire wheels, extra tire, tube and tire lock



The new Oakland is a powerful, roomy, beautiful car—built to exacting standards of comfort and dependable operation. You will want to see and drive it. Meanwhile, the value may be judged by these distinctive fine-car features:

V-TYPE 8-CYLINDER ENGINE—the type long identified with cars outstanding for ability. Oakland's motor develops 85 horsepower smoothly, quietly - - with remarkable evenness under all driving conditions.

SYNCRO-MESH TRANSMISSION—the quick, clashless, quiet-shifting mechanism hitherto considered a luxury for the few—now just a part of Oakland's new value.

NEW QUIET SECOND GEAR—comparable in quietness to the "high" gears you know—and an important factor in Oakland's notably rapid acceleration.

RUBBER-CUSHIONED CHASSIS—at 41 points, absorbing shocks, greatly adding to riding ease and stability on the road, and prolonging the life of the car. Oakland's rubber-cushioned spring shackles are rattle-proof and eliminate twelve points of lubrication.

NEW BODIES BY FISHER—not only contributing new values in modish appearance, comfort, craftsmanship and safety, but introducing advanced insulation against heat, cold and noise.

WHIPCORD OR MOHAIR UPHOLSTERY—giving Oakland interiors the atmosphere of flawless good taste and the wearing qualities essential to lasting value; fittings of corresponding quality.

A demonstration will be arranged at your convenience, without obligation.

Sailings June to September

CRUISE to the heart of Old French-Canada. We take you by rail to Toronto, Queen City of Canada, where your foreign adventure begins. You set sail on a luxurious steamer, one of the world's largest fresh water fleet. You will visit, en route, Montreal—the metropolis, and the fortress city of Quebec, Gibraltar of North America.

You will cruise among the Thousand Islands—set like a thousand jewels in azure blue waters, experience the thrills of shooting the great St. Lawrence Rapids. Near Quebec you will pay your respects at the miracle shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupré and hear the thunder of Montmorency Falls, higher than Niagara.

Beyond Quebec the high Laurentians follow the St. Lawrence and you cruise in the shadow of these ancient mountains. The steamer puts in at fashionable Murray Bay, and quaint and lovely Tadoussac, Canada's oldest settlement. The glory of the Saguenay River, seen at sunset and again at dawn, is a spectacle to impress the most widely travelled. The wild grandeur of Trinity Bay, guarded by the tremendous capes, Trinity and Eternity—the ship's siren reverberating like giant laughter among the eternal hills—gives you a touch of the loneliness, austerity and beauty of the silent places.

A spirit of gaiety prevails for the entire journey, and there is not a dull moment on ship or shore. You dance every evening to the music of a lively orchestra. Delicious meals satisfy ravenous appetites. You will vote this the best vacation ever.

Remember, every expense on this enjoyable cruise has been foreseen and included in the figure quoted above, as well as stop-overs at important hotels en route. A courteous escort relieves you of every travel worry.

A stone had been tied around her neck and one on her feet. Brass wire was used to secure the stones. The body was discovered about noon today by two fishermen, who failed to give their names.

Portal, N. D., April 19.—(AP)—King Prajadhipok, first reigning Asiastic monarch to visit this country, and his young queen, Rambai Ibarni, reached the United States late tonight when they came into this international border town from Canada.

Richard Southgate, acting chief of the division of international conferences and protocol, and Stanley K. Hornbeck, chief of the division of far eastern affairs, came here this afternoon to await the arrival of the imperial train. They were accompanied by two federal secret operatives who boarded the train here to continue with the monarch until his arrival in the east.

The king and queen were admitted into this country without a passport to conform with international etiquette. W. H. Gill, customs collector here, went to Moosejaw, Sask., to meet the royal train so that the work of passing the party through the customs could be accomplished without delay here.

HOOVER BACK IN CAPITAL AFTER 2 DAYS AT CAMP

Washington, D. C., April 19.—(AP)—President Hoover and his party returned to the White House tonight after a week-end of rest and fishing at his Rapidan camp in Virginia. The automobile trip to Washington was uneventful, but the presidential party had the advantage of a brilliant mid-afternoon sun for the start.

Mrs. Hoover left the camp and arrived at the White House ten minutes ahead of her husband, their son Allan driving her open car.

The President and Mrs. Hoover returned from the camp today to put their son Allan on an early morning train for his return to Harvard, where he is doing graduate work.

The chief executive was pleased with his first day of fishing this season, but did not fish today, following his rule of not fishing on Sunday. He spent the morning sitting in the warm sun talking with members of his party and inspecting parts of the Rapidan he did not fish yesterday.

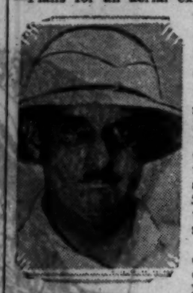
UNMAPPED AREA OF DUTCH GUIANA TO BE EXPLORED

U. S. Scientist Will Fly Over Jungles.

Denver, Colo., April 19.—[Special.]—Plans for an aerial expedition into the uncharted jungles of Dutch Guiana were announced tonight by Jean M. Dubois of Denver, son of the distinguished scientist who discovered the Java ape man.



JEAN M. DUBOIS.

Vast areas of the tropical country Dubois intends to penetrate in his expedition this July are blank spaces on the map of the world. White men never have set foot on the territory.

Permission to make the hazardous trip has been obtained by Dubois from the governor of Dutch Guiana.

Little Known of Interior.

"Only a small part of the fifty thousand square miles of area of the tropical country which compose Dutch Guiana have been explored," Dubois said tonight. "The known areas are mostly along the coast. The interior is one of the few unmapped spots left in the world.

"We will make our base at Paramaribo and from there will make short exploration trips along the coast. Then will come a nine hundred mile nonstop flight."

Death probably would be the penalty if a forced landing became necessary, Dubois said. The luxurious growth of tropical plants would make it impossible for a pilot to guide a ship safely to earth.

Falls Will Be Photographed.

Dubois will have a cameraman, with sound and color film equipment, and a complete and scientific film version of the travels will be made. Aerial pictures of Kaietuer falls, in British Guiana, five times as high as Niagara falls, will be taken.

The party will travel in a Bellanca hydroplane, so that Dubois may cruise on rivers in the midst of the jungle wilderness.

Dubois has commissions for scientific data from his father, Dr. Eugene Dubois of Haarlem, Holland, and from the Field Museum in Chicago, as well as other nationally known institutions.

The Field museum, he said, has commissioned him to obtain groups of small mammals and pictures of the animals in their natural habitat.

SEABURY TO SPEED CRAIN HEARING; MAY REPORT BY MAY 1ST

New York, April 19.—[Special.]—Public hearings on the City club's charges of inefficiency and negligence against District Attorney Thomas C. T. Crain will be resumed tomorrow before Samuel Seabury, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's commissioner, after a recess of a week.

Indications today were that Mr. Seabury and John Kirkland Clark, his chief counsel, were planning a whirlwind finish of their inquiry. It was predicted that Mr. Seabury's report and recommendations would be in the governor's hands before the governor leaves May 1 for a holiday at Warm Springs, Ga.

With the exception of one or two possible interruptions, it is believed that the hearings will now proceed from day to day until all the charges have been considered in public.

Mr. Crain, who has denied the allegation that he was lax in prosecuting racketeers, has been called upon now to defend his general administration of the office he holds—to explain the action he took in sixteen stock fraud cases referred to him by the attorney general's office, and to tell why the investigation he undertook into conditions in the Magistrates' courts was not as productive as that of Mr. Seabury.

"HAPPY JACK," N. Y. GANGSTER, SHOT TO DEATH

New York, April 19.—[Special.]—John Little, known to the underworld as "Happy Jack," paid the penalty today for having "played ball" with the authorities. His body was found lying on a refuse heap in Long Island City with three bullets lodged in it.

Little had been committed to prison several times, and had escaped twice. He won a pardon in 1929, when he helped quell a riot at Clinton prison. At that time he was serving a life sentence. According to the theory of the police, he was shot and killed today by enemies he made while in prison.

Nevertheless, a check is being made to see if this latest slaying is connected in any way with the shooting to death of Giuseppe Masseria, known as "Joe, the Boss."

Little had a criminal reputation that extended back as far as 1913.

Fame of New Prescription Spreads to England

In all England Lieutenant Colonel Heyworth-Savage could not find a remedy for indigestion equal to ACIDINE. Another proof that ACIDINE is beyond doubt the best remedy for acid stomach troubles. Lieut. Colonel Heyworth-Savage sent clear to America for ACIDINE for he couldn't buy it in his native country. He says: "A friend gave me some of your ACIDINE purchased while in the States, which I found very good for indigestion. Please send me six packages at once to Brodwell Grove, Burford, Oxford, England."

ACIDINE is entirely different from other known remedies. Contains the marvelous digestant called Japtase. In laboratory experiments Japtase has been tested on certain starchy foods which cause so much stomach distress. It liquefied 800 times its weight of such foods in only thirty minutes!

Five other scientific ingredients in ACIDINE neutralize burning acid, soothe irritated stomach lining, stop gas and headache from acidity. No other known remedy contains this scientific combination to end acid stomach.

Physicians are prescribing ACIDINE as the best remedy they know of for acid indigestion and dyspepsia. Introduced only last year, people who first secured it were so delighted that its use spread like wildfire. Thousands of stomach sufferers have used it already, and they are enthusiastic boosters.

To get rid of acid stomach torture quick, get ACIDINE from Walgreen's today. Costs only a few cents. Watch pain and gas disappear. Eat, drink and smoke all you like. Results guaranteed. If not delighted, maker refunds money. Get ACIDINE today at Walgreen's.

AMELIA EARHART says:

"I LIKE NEW THINGS AND MODERN METHODS —THAT'S WHY I BOUGHT AN AIR-COOLED FRANKLIN"

Amelia Earhart—with her new autogiro and her new Franklin—both air-cooled

Amelia Earhart—world's greatest aviatrix and holder of important air speed records for women—was the first woman to fly the Atlantic—and to solo an autogiro.

Recently, after purchasing a Franklin, she wrote to Mr. Franklin: "Just as 'giros may point the way to needed improvement in airplane design—just as air-cooled motors have almost replaced water-cooled engines in commercial aircraft, so air-cooling in automobiles is proving superior to complicated liquid methods with power plants.

"The smooth action of the Franklin in flight is very pleasant. Even after a long drive I feel no fatigue. It handles beautifully and surely. The response of the air-cooled airplane-type engine is always gratifying."

Amelia Earhart's enthusiasm for Franklin is typical of everyone who drives the car. Franklin is not only a man's car because of its mechanical superiority—it is also a woman's car because of its easy handling and smart styling. During the next few weeks women particularly are invited to see and drive the new De Luxe Franklin—to understand by actual experience how Miss Earhart feels about her new De Luxe Franklin.

THE great popularity of the first series of "Tune Tangle" Crosswords and the urgent request of hundreds of readers for another series is answered by "Tune Tangles," Second Series, starting today. All those who participated in the first series greatly enjoyed solving the crosswords. Now the Tribune invites both old and new enthusiasts to join in solving the Tangles in this Second Series. It's an easy and fascinating pastime.

Every evening W-G-N, the Chicago Tribune station on the Drake Hotel, will broadcast three "Songs of Yesterday"—old time tunes, such as "Dixie," "After the Ball," "Hiawatha"—old songs known to everyone. The title of some of the songs broadcast will be in the next day's "Tune Tangle" printed in the Daily Tribune. Just solve the crossword and name the song. Solve these crosswords just like any other crossword puzzle. Prizes will be paid on merit alone. Start now with Tune Tangle No. 1 shown to the right. Follow the rules—that's all. You are invited to listen to the broadcast, solve the Tune Tangle Crossword in the next day's Tribune and name the Song.

2. The Chicago Tribune will pay $5,000.00 in Cash Prizes to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved and neatest complete sets of answers in accordance with these rules. NOTE: This means that you do not necessarily have to solve each of the 42 Tune Tangles completely to win. The prizes will be paid to the persons whose entries rank highest.

3. The prizes are as follows:

5. Tune Tangle Crosswords are to be submitted only in complete sets. Do NOT send in each puzzle separately. Hold all puzzles until you have the complete set of 42. Then send them to "Tune Tangles," Chicago Tribune, Postoffice Box 1718, Chicago, Illinois. All entries must be in by midnight, 15 days after Puzzle No. 42 has been printed.

BETHLEN REVIEWS 10 YEAR WORK AS HUNGARY SAVIOR

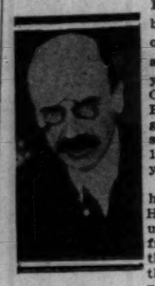
BY ANDREW CSANK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUDAPEST, Hungary, April 19.—There is only one prime minister in Europe who has been at the head of his country's affairs for ten years. He is Count Stephen Bethlen of Hungary, who assumed office April 19, 1921, just ten years ago today.



COUNT STEPHEN BETHLEN. [Acme Photo.]

In 1921, when he entered office, Hungary appeared unable to recover from the losses of the great war and the treaty of Trianon. These dismembered the country, gave to newly formed states not only two-thirds of her territory and population, but practically all of her iron, salt, and mountain timber lands.

Saved from Bolshevism.

What was left of Hungary suffered four months of bolshevism. Hungarian currency was almost without value, and as a reaction against bolshevism white terroristic troops overflowed Hungarian cities and villages. Governments changed overnight as the situation grew worse, each finding itself unable to deal with the gigantic problem.

Then came the Bethlen government. Its strong hand restored order in the streets, Budapest became peaceful, and gradually life took its normal forms. A new currency was issued, called pengo, after money in use in Hungary 200 years ago. Foreign bankers were given fresh assurance of the country's stability, and new economic life was thus brought about.

Today, the tenth anniversary of his premiership, Count Bethlen discussed his accomplishments in the past and his opinions of immediate developments in Europe. He disposed of his own rule briefly.

Dislikes to Talk of Self.

"I do not like to answer questions which compel me to be the jury in my own case," he said. "What I can say is this: I never hunted power, and I don't think that power should be the aim of any one's ambition."

About Europe he was more loquacious. He has strong ideas about Foreign Minister Briand's plan for a United States of Europe.

"The Hungarian government gave a hearty welcome to the French plan last year," he said. "But we also declared that it is absolutely necessary to cancel all inequalities. We also called the attention of the French government to the fact that certain contracts of alliance existing between some of the states are in controversy with the spirit M. Briand propounded in outlining conditions of collaboration.

Conflicts with Versailles Pact.

"The Hungarian government stressed from the first that a United States of Europe cannot be in harmony with conditions produced by the treaty of Versailles. The Hungarian government believes that political and economic conditions of the world make it necessary that all states should be brought nearer together, and that settlement of economic problems could be followed by political readjustment.

"As for ourselves, we must follow a policy of strengthening our internal forces. The peace treaty dismembered Hungary to such an extent, deprived us of so many economic and cultural forces, that we must assume the superhuman task of restoring what was created here by a thousand years' work and which we lost—through no fault of our own.

"Hungary never wanted war, much less to acquire the territories of other states. But events coerced her to take part in the war. This is proved by historic documents. We are not responsible that external forces, against which we were feeble, and also our special constitutional position carried us away."

Says Hungary Wants King.

The premier then turned to the question of the eventual selection of a king for the country, still a kingdom but without a ruler. Prince Otto, son of the late King Charles IV, of Hapsburg, and who recently reached his majority, is the legitimate pretender to the throne.

"Hungary is a kingdom, for the time without a king," Count Bethlen said. "This may seem odd to a foreigner, but everybody who knows the character of the Hungarian people and how they cling to their thousand years of tradition, must also understand why they are monarchists. Nothing could express this more clearly than the fact that the constituent assembly, after the revolutions, accepted as its first task passage of the bill of 1920, expressing the sentiments of the people.

"The popular conviction expressed itself so strongly and in such a constitutional form that there can be no doubt about the people's will that Hungary should be a kingdom in the future. But the vacant throne will be filled only at a time when the nation can make a declaration independent and free of all external influences. When this moment arrives, then and then only, will parliament, the body of the national will, decide on whose head the crown of St. Stephen will be placed."

Assails Post-War Treaties.

Count Bethlen was outspoken about the post-war treaties.

"The damage done by those treaties is apparent all over the world," he declared, "both in an economic and a political sense. Opinion against the treaties, although at present only beginning to take hold in other parts of the world, eventually will assume such force that it will produce an atmosphere where revision, now impossible, will be feasible by the aid of public opinion without international convulsions as a result."

He cried down editorial comments on his recent visits to Rome, Berlin, Vienna, and Ankara, which attached some hidden motive to them.

"The reason for my visits was partly to strengthen old friendships, partly to return visits paid to Budapest, and partly to confer on economic matters," he said. "As a consequence there are beginning a series of meetings on economic subjects with certain states and we hope to finish them in a way that will be advantageous to all."

Friend Tells Life Story of D. H. Lawrence

Recital Both Full and Cruel, Critic Says.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"SON OF WOMAN," by John Middleton Murry [Cape-Smith], is a remarkable biography for several reasons. It reveals the inner life of its hero, D. H. Lawrence, as Lawrence himself never would have seen the core of his being. Its material all is drawn not from the facts of the life of Lawrence, but from his books, which, according to Mr. Murry, chronicle not only the facts but the significance of the facts of his life, both physical and psychic. It was written by Lawrence's closest friend. Not the least of the factors of its startling power is that last. No enemy of D. H. Lawrence, no matter how bitter, how virulent his hatred of Lawrence, could have done a more cruel life of him. And yet no enemy would have had the love for his subject to have done a cruel thing in order that Lawrence might be explained to his generation and thus understood, be given his due as an artist.

D. H. LAWRENCE.

Lawrence once said to Middleton Murry, "Do not betray me!"

"In this book have I betrayed you?" Mr. Murry asks at the end of the biography. "Was it this that I have done of which you were afraid? There was nothing to fear. This betrayal was the one thing you lacked, the one thing I had to give, that you might shine forth among men as the thing of wonder that you were. . . . Two eternal things you denied, two things of which the promise was richer in you than in any other man whom living men have known: Love and the spirit, which cannot exist apart."

The whole volume is a detailed analysis of D. H. Lawrence's denial of the oneness of love and the spirit, of Lawrence's assertion that sex and sensuality are apart from love. Practically everything that Lawrence ever wrote, Mr. Murry says, was autobiographical. Every one of the better novels, the poems, the two volumes on the subconscious, are almost exact transcripts of Lawrence's mental processes during the period in which he wrote them. Mr. Murry quotes freely from Lawrence's work to clarify his conclusions about that perplexing author, for of all of the writers of his day—our day, that is, for he died very recently—there has been no one who has at the same time written so beautifully and so grossly. Lawrence's obsession with sex was his mania. Middleton Murry studies that obsession as a psychiatrist would. He brings it boldly to the light, using Lawrence's own written words as his proof.

In the relation of Lawrence to his mother, set down almost exactly in the first part of "Sons and Lovers," the young man's passion for her makes it impossible for him to love another woman. When he takes a young woman of his own age, his sense of the sacrament of love is violated. From that time until his death, Murry says, Lawrence always really felt that love between man and woman was mere sensuality. Also Lawrence never could really give a woman the love which her nature demanded. He thus became obsessed with the idea that it was woman's fault—woman in general—not his own personal lack. He became madly obsessed with a search for release from that deficiency, from his agonies of searching for love and finding something less than his search demanded.

The author of the biography says in a note to the reader at the beginning of the book: "This is the story of one of the greatest lovers the world has ever known; of a hero of love, of a man whose capacity for love was so great that he was afraid of it.

"In him it was a devouring flame while yet a boy. It was not love for his mother only, but love of all men and all women and all things created; a devouring flame of universal love. . . . He strove to kill his love; he fled away from it, he hid his face from it, he sought oblivion from it—in woman. The more avidly he sought oblivion from this consuming flame of love the less he found it, the less capable he became of finding it. And slowly and inevitably the love turned to hate. Hate, first and last, of himself, who had feared his love and sought to kill it; hate next of woman . . . hate finally of a world of men which had caused him to suffer as scarcely any man had suffered before."

All that process of acidation Mr. Murry traces — through Lawrence's work—frankly, freely discussing the inner bitter workings of the novelist's spirit.

That is one phase of "Son of Woman," the intimate, startling disclosure of Lawrence's gropings for a solution to his peculiar physical and psychic problem. Mr. Murry sees him "born to sorrow," as the title of the volume indicates.

The other phase of the book is that it is one of the keenest criticisms of the relationship between a man's inner being and his creative work that has ever been written. It is a brilliant critical picture of the entire creative output of D. H. Lawrence. Mr. Murry analyses not only the work itself but the inevitable reaction of the intelligent reader to the work. "Hence comes the horror which preys on a sensitive reader as he submits himself to the works of this period," Murry says. "He is watching the decomposition of a greatly gifted human soul."

Of the much discussed "Lady Chatterley's Lover" the biographer says, "Regarded objectively, it is a wearisome and oppressive book; obviously the work of a weary and hopeless man." On the other hand, "Fantasia of the Unconscious" is his greatest book, and, absolutely, it is a great book. There are the two extremes of his genius.

"You muddied the spring of living water that flowed in you more richly than in any man of your time. We needed a leader and a prophet; you were marked by destiny to be the man, and you failed us."

"The story told in this book is hard to tell," Mr. Murry says, "and perhaps not easy to understand. . . . I implore those who read it never to forget that Lawrence belongs to the order of men who cannot be judged but only loved."

Loving D. H. Lawrence after "Son of Woman" would seem to me to be impossible!

POPE TALKS AGAIN AFTER OTHERS TELL OF SCIENTIFIC WORK

VATICAN CITY, April 19.—(AP)—Pope Pius' voice was broadcast for the second time from the new Vatican City radio station today when he blessed the modern air transmission afforded him by the station.

The pontiff's talk followed the first of a series of brief discussions of scientific topics by members of the pontifical academy.

"It is with great pleasure that I proceed with the second inauguration of the Vatican radio station, the first being an inauguration of faith while the second is an inauguration of science," the pope said. "Of both faith and science the only altar is God. Therefore the Vatican council has been able to proclaim that there is no contradiction between faith and science.

"New members of the academy have given us an occasion to appreciate the duties and harmonies which are derived from this union of science and faith. We are thankful and it is in contemplation of these two universes, natural and supernatural, that we impart to you and your noble works our apostolic blessings."

Good Morning!

Daniel Curtiz was a NICE young man. He was a most IMPOSSIBLY nice young man. He lived by letter.

And how might that be? you ask.

Well, HOW he did comprises the story of "A Virtuous Husband," which is the screen adaptation of "Apron Strings," now snowing at the Playhouse.

You see, before Daniel's mother died she made up her mind to always live on with her son. SO—she wrote letters. Not one letter or two letters, but RAFTS of letters instructing her boy as to how he must act in every conceivable crisis. The epistles she addressed somewhat as follows:

To My Son When He Falls Off a Bicycle.
To My Son When a Strange Woman Winketh.
To My Son When He Meets the Right Girl.
To My Son Before He Proposes.
To My Son After He Proposes.
To My Son When He Is Accepted.
To My Son Regarding His Wedding and as to Where He Shall Be Married.
To My Son on His Wedding Night . . . !
Can you IMAGINE . . . !

The letters were intrusted by the thoughtful defunct to Son's uncle, who is also the family lawyer. Ezra Hunniwell is the name and Ezra's instructions are to dole out the precious missives at proper moments.

Daniel, firmly believing his mother to have been the most wonderful woman in the world, regards the mass of correspondence from the grave as a treasure trove of untold value. Never a step does he take without consulting the ever-ready letters.

He gets along all right—though he is far from popular—until he meets, loves, proposes to, and weds a Modern Maiden. She doesn't know what to make of her queer pet until, one day, she learns the TRUTH.

Does fur fly? Well, not exactly fur. And now see pix for further developments.

"A Virtuous Husband" is brightly acted and dialogued and has been directed with humor. The characters are aptly cast and the piece is well equipped with suspense and laughter.

Of its kind—light comedy—it's a honey.

And now we go back to the world war and contemplate a screened Laurajeanlibbyish yarn whose principal claim to your interest lies in the smart acting of players you like.

Constance Bennett handles beautifully the rôle of an American Red Cross nurse who, over in England, meets and loves—but doesn't wed—an American soldier who goes to the front. Word comes of his death, and, alas! poor Doris is to have a child!

She plans to go back to Brooklyn,

"But NO!" says a wealthy Englishman whom she has nursed and who adores her. "Be MY wife. I will protect you and treat your child as my own . . .!"

This seems the best thing that Doris can do. So she does it—and manages to be fairly happy until—yes, you've guessed it!—Barry Craig returns unexpectedly, never having gone west as was reported.

Though determined to be loyal to the man who has given his name to herself and offspring, Doris takes an afternoon off to go to Barry's hotel and explain things.

Her husband, hearing of the visit (from her), believes the worst—which isn't true—and casts her out. O dear . . . ! But men are like that.

There's a lot more I could tell you but I'll content myself with assuring you that matters turn out EXACTLY as you thought they would!

You won't be bored with "Born to Love," because it IS effectively presented. But you WILL wish the pleasing players had fallen heir to a better story.

See you tomorrow!

D. A. R. Recalls Early History of Tennessee

Dedicates Statue to State's First Governor.

Washington, D. C., April 19.—(AP)—A vanguard of 3,000 Daughters of the American Revolution, assembled here for their annual continental congress, today dedicated in Statuary hall a statue of John Sevier, first governor of Tennessee.

The service at the national capitol was a prelude to a full week's program stressing love of country and national defense and opposing communism.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover has advised the group she would attend the opening session of the congress Monday morning.

Last year the organization heard President Hoover's appeal in behalf of the world court, but failed to indorse that tribunal. Vice President Curtis will be the highest ranking official on the platform of the present congress, with an address on Monday night. His speech will be followed with an address by Secretary Hyde on nationalism.

Mrs. Joseph Hayes Acklen, state regent of Tennessee, presided at today's ceremony. To Sevier, Indian fighter, hero of King's mountain, many tributes were paid, including those of Representative Byrns of Tennessee, and Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general of the D. A. R. Gov. Henry H. Horton presented the statue in behalf of Tennessee.

Selection of seven new vice presidents general from ten candidates, comprising this year's elections, promised some politics to keep pace with patriotic programs and drafting of resolutions.

WERRENRATH GIVES SONG RECITAL IN DANISH AND GERMAN

BY EDWARD MOORE.

In the numerous and diverse musical events of yesterday afternoon, Reinald Warrenrath, the baritone, was the only one to give a song recital. Having lately turned his attention to radio in a rather thorough way, he is not the regular concert visitor that he used to be, but it would seem, whether for that reason or some other, to be a rather better artist. In groups of German and Danish songs he showed an entirely effective and agreeable manner of letting the songs speak for themselves as much as possible. At the same time he was thoroughly intelligent about their interpretations, and his voice has, to a considerable extent, lost its familiar mannerism of nasality. He was at the Studebaker.

Similarly Charlotte Vogel at the Playhouse was the only one to give a piano recital. She is at the stage of artistic development now where she plays carefully and correctly, still awaiting the period when she will throw herself into her music with unconscious ease and therefore more fire. Up to the present she has done well.

The Chicago Lutheran Teachers' chorus gave their annual concert at Orchestra hall yesterday, as usual under the direction of George L. Tenney, and singing this time Handel's fine old oratorio, "Samson." About 150 in the chorus and assisted by a children's chorus of slightly larger numbers, they sang with excellent spirit and considerable familiarity with the Handel traditions. The soloists were Edith Trewartha, Esther Muenstermann, Walter Tenney, and Raymond Koch, all in good form and making first class impressions.

The Rosary College Glee club, hitherto unknown in Chicago concerts, appeared at the Blackstone under the direction of LeRoy Wetzel, and sang so well that they should feel encouraged to make it an annual event. A girls' chorus, well balanced and with a high average of vocal ability, they were not only competent but highly artistic in a series of part songs. Their soloist was Margaret Mary Williams, harpist.

Another chorus, the North Side Continuation Schools Glee club, were at the Eighth Street theater, and were heard in Richard Kountz's cantata, "In Woodland," which they sang with exhilarating spirit, good intonation, and good enunciation under the direction of Miss Mary G. Lusson. Their soloists were two, Angelo Raffaelli, tenor, who is reported to have made a great hit, and Mary Healy, soprano.

Two string quartets also were included in the day's round. The Amy Neill quartet played at the Cordon club under the auspices of Mu Phi Epsilon. The Chicago String quartet, now near the end of its series at the Chicago Woman's club theater, were assisted by Victor Prahl, baritone.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

UPON the heels of the departed "Student Prince," at the Grand Opera house, comes another revival from the ample repertory of Sigmund Romberg—"My Maryland," an operetta dealing with Barbara Frietchie, the intrepid flag flaunter of Fredericktown. It dates back only a few years [if the play by Clyde Fitch upon which its libretto was built is disregarded]; and it is too young to be blessed with sentimental traditions. It has no special fame among the musical romances which, so far as Chicago is concerned, may be called the "Great Northern school"; but it will serve well enough for a spring-time song festival at the Grand.

This is the show that boasts of Mr. Romberg's contribution to the patriotic anthems—a rousing soldiers' chorus, containing appropriate sentiments about the reunion of the Blue and the Gray, bugle calls, a quotation from "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and the rhythm of a column of infantry foot-slogging toward the front. You remember its refrain, of course:

Your land and my land
Will be our land some day.
White bars and bright stars
Tum-ta tum tum, hooray.

Or words to that effect. It's a decidedly impressive ditty which stirs ancestral memories and gives the musket bearing maennerchor an opportunity for martial gestures after the style of Dennis King. "Your Land and My Land" is the theme song of "My Maryland," and the chief reason for the revival. The operetta contains a secondary motif of melody for tenor and soprano called "The Same Silver Moon," but when it was composed Mr. Romberg's muse had taken a day off.

You have to wait until the third act to see Barbara Frietchie and "Stonewall" Jackson do their legendary stuff. For the sake of romance the old gray head that the gallant Confederate field marshal so chivalrously spared has been rejuvenated. Barbara is a blond and the belle of the burg, and she flies the Stars and Stripes in the face of her rebel kinsmen because she is the secret bride of a Union officer. That's the way librettists tamper with history and folklore in order to make what they call a plot.

The company for this revival is as good as that which carried "My Maryland" through a long run at the Great Northern two or three seasons ago. Ruth Urban, an expert operetta singer, is the romantic Barbara; Alexander Callam, as the ardent captain, does justice to "Your Land and My Land" and the military atmosphere; Betty Byron bounces about actively as the coy soubrette, and Frank Lalor and Louise Beaudet, two mellow old-timers, are capable comics.

Earl Carroll's "Sketch Book" revue will end its stay at the Garrick theater next Saturday night and will go touring westward with the intention of reaching California. . . . "Stepping Sisters" will move from the Apollo to the Cort theater next Sunday night. . . . A revival of "Blossom Time" is scheduled to follow "Three Little Girls" at the Great Northern, opening some time in May. . . . "On the Spot," Edgar Wallace's melodrama of Chicago's gangsters, will be a spring addition to the playbills. . . . Zoe Akins' play with the bizarre title, "The Greeks Had a Word for It," is also headed this way.

Negroes to Study Problem of Housing Their Race

Washington, D. C., April 19.—(AP)—A nation-wide study of Negro housing conditions by a committee of Negroes was announced today by President Hoover's conference on home building and home ownership. The committee is headed by Nannie H. Burroughs, president of the National Training School for Women and Girls. John M. Gries, secretary of the conference, said home financing, designing, and other aspects would be studied. The Negro committee includes: George R. Arthur and Mrs. Irene M. Gaines, Chicago; Mrs. Lena Trent Gordon, Philadelphia; Lorenzo M. Greene, Washington, D. C.; Leon R. Harris, Moline, Ill.; T. Arnold Hill, New York; R. H. Hogan, Lexington, Ky.; Zack Hubert, Langston, Okla.; and Daisy E. Lampkin, Pittsburgh.

Chicago Jews to Aid Fund for Palestine

Will Raise $125,000 of $2,500,000.

A campaign to raise $125,000 as Chicago's share toward a $2,500,000 fund for the purchase and colonization of land in Palestine was started last night at a massmeeting of Chicago Jews in the Hotel Sherman. Hundreds of persons attended.

During the afternoon a committee representing nearly 200 Jewish congregations and local Zionist organizations had met in the same hotel, heard the Zionist plan outlined by three leaders in the colonization movement, and pledged the raising of the $125,000 over a five year period. About $10,000 was subscribed at the conference.

The conference was opened by Judge Harry M. Fisher, head of the local Zionist organization. In the principal address of the meeting, Bernard Stone of New York, field secretary of the national Jewish fund, declared the establishment of a Jewish national home to be essential to the security of the race.

"The development of Palestine is necessary, since our people, in times of persecution and oppression, must have a land of their own where they may seek refuge," Mr. Stone said.

At present, Mr. Stone pointed out, only 5 or 6 per cent of the land in Palestine is owned by Jews and only 20 per cent of the population is Jewish.

Under the so-called five year Palestine plan, originated by a group of Zionist leaders in Washington, D. C., last February, American Jews are to finance the purchase of a tract in Palestine to be colonized by American and European Jews, and developed for the cultivation of oranges, lemons, olives and other fruits.

The tract is to be divided into parcels, each to be named for the city whence came the money for its purchase, Mr. Stone explained. Chicago's $125,000, for example, is to be devoted to the purchase of a parcel to be called Nahalath Chicago, or Chicagoland, and Chicago Jews are to have preference as colonists.

Title to the properties will be retained by the World Zionist organization, the parcels to be leased to the colonists for as long as they till the land. At the conference an organization for raising the $125,000 was set up under the chairmanship of Arthur J. Goldberg, president of the Chicago chapter of Avukah, the American Federation of Student Zionists.

Dr. Judah L. Magnes, chancellor of the Hebrew university in Palestine, who is making an extended tour of the United States in behalf of the university, outlined the purposes of the Hebrew school in a speech last night at the Standard club. The Society of Friends of the university sponsored a dinner and reception in honor of the chancellor. He explained that the school endeavored to bring together the old culture of the Holy Land and the new science of the west.

Boston, Mass., April 19.—(Special.)—Eight greater Boston cities and towns join this year in the annual celebration of Patriot's day, commemorating the 156th anniversary of the battles of Lexington and Concord. The celebration comes to a climax tomorrow in the ride of Paul Revere and the annual marathon race. The celebration opened last night with the hanging of lanterns in the belfry of Old North church at 7:45 in the manner in which signal lanterns for Paul Revere were hung in 1775. Today, in Lexington and Medford, churches held religious services as part of the holiday observance.

PARIS, April 19.—(AP)—The painter prince, Eugene of Sweden, youngest brother of King Gustave, tomorrow opens what artists call a "one man show." Of all the members of the Swedish reigning house, Prince Eugene is considered the most Parisian and the most conscious of the French ancestry of the Bernadotte family.

DR. STIFLER TO QUIT EVANSTON PULPIT FOR WORK AT U. OF C.

Dr. James Madison Stifler, who has been pastor of the First Baptist church of Evanston since 1909, offered his resignation to his congregation yesterday. It will take effect on June 1.

Dr. Stifler said he wished to devote his time to his duties as a trustee of the University of Chicago.

As chairman of the university board's committee on development, Dr. Stifler has had an important part in the planning of the new system at the university, and President Robert Maynard Hutchins invited him to give the university his full efforts.

"This is in line with other work I have been doing," the minister said. "I have been a member of the board of education of the Northern Baptist convention for nearly twenty years, and I was for a long time associated with Dr. Ernest DeWitt Burton, former president of the University of Chicago.

"I am enthusiastic over the opportunity to aid in the advancement of educational methods. I am hopeful that the University of Chicago is going to mark the beginning of a happier day in the education of our American youth."

Dr. Stifler said that he would continue to live in Evanston until Sept. 1. He has been president of the Central Association of Evanston Charities for six years.

Doris Advises This Woman to Assert Her Rights

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"If you were a healthy young woman of 26, in love with your husband, physically and financially able to have a child and desiring it more than anything else in life—BUT your husband, very much in love with you, did not wish a child, did not feel the need of one, did not want the expense and responsibility—would you, in direct opposition to his wishes, proceed to have the child? And trust to his love and instinct to be happy, in time, over the condition? Or would repress your own desires and live without children?—E. W."

I'd spring the "little garment stuff" on him, to his complete and total surprise, as they used to do in the old time reels. No use arguing about something he can't have any real feelings about until he gets them from real daddy experience. His objections, like that of a lot of other men under similar circumstances, are based upon a lot of poppycock arguments about the dangers of childbirth, about being deprived of his beloved wife's society, and about the terrific expense and responsibility of parentage.

Go ahead and make a daddy of him before he has time to think up more arguments. If he loves you, he won't walk out on you. And the chances are ten to one after his small image [or yours] arrives you won't be able to drive him away, should you want to.

Some young husbands go through that argumentative period about child having and survive it, idolatrous daddies.

Food Talk.

I have had a number of letters recently asking why we specify the use of sour milk in some of our recipes when it is impossible to make milk sour in the ordinary city household. I acknowledge that the term "sour" milk is not as definite as it should be. Thank you for pointing out this inconsistency.

In trying to sour milk the housewife follows the old farm method—sets the milk in a warm place and lets it stand for a day or so. But she cannot obtain a milk of the good old fashioned sour milk flavor with pasteurized milk. The reason is that a number of the lactic acid bacteria [the beneficial bacteria in milk] are killed along with the harmful ones in pasteurization. And not enough of them are left to produce a pronounced lactic acid flavor when the milk is given an opportunity to sour.

When I develop or test a recipe that demands the use of a sour milk I use buttermilk.

There are two kinds of this buttermilk—the cultured or manufactured buttermilk which is pasteurized skimmed milk to which a lactic acid culture is added. It sells for 10 cents a quart. The other is a churned buttermilk—the milk left after pasteurized sweet cream is churned for butter. It sells for 12 cents a quart. Churned buttermilk is not as acid as is the manufactured. Therefore the latter requires the use of a little more soda.

Churned buttermilk contains about 0.65 per cent of acid and the manufactured buttermilk contains 0.75 per cent. Buttermilk may be used successfully in any recipe which calls for sour milk.

Wipe the tenderloin with a damp cloth, then take a long bladed knife and make an incision lengthwise, beginning in the center of the wide end of the tenderloin. If the knife is not long enough the handle of a wooden spoon can be used to extend this pocket almost to the other end of the loin. Into this pocket carefully force 6 or 7 hard cooked eggs which have been peeled. The eggs should lie lengthwise and touch each other. When the pocket is filled, sew up opening. Season the tenderloin with salt [¾ teaspoon salt for each pound of meat] pepper, and paprika. Add 2 onions and 1 cup of hot water and roast in a hot oven [500° F.] for 20 minutes. Then reduce the heat to a slow oven [300° F.] and cook from 30 to 40 minutes, the time depending on the weight of the meat. Make a mushroom sauce and thicken it a little.

SPINACH AND TONGUE SALAD.

Cook fresh spinach in very little water in an open kettle until tender. This will require about six minutes if the spinach is turned over with a fork two or three times. Drain thoroughly and chop—but not too fine. Season with a little finely minced onion or chives, nutmeg and salt. Julienne smoked or tongue very fine and mix one part tongue with the two parts spinach. Press into a mold and allow to chill in the icebox for two or three hours. Turn out on to nests of lettuce leaves and garnish with chopped capers and quartered eggs. Serve with French dressing.

MacLeish Will Talk as Poet Here Friday

BY THALIA

ARCHIBALD MAC LEISH, the poet, is coming to town this week, and the Arts club is having him tell about "Certain Aspects of Contemporary Poetry" at one of those agreeable morning gatherings next Friday at 11:30 o'clock. Mrs. William Nitze, chairman of the literature committee of the club, is to entertain for the speaker at luncheon after his talk.

Mr. MacLeish will be with his mother, Mrs. Andrew MacLeish, at her Glencoe place, "Craigie Lea," during his brief visit, but I haven't been able to find out whether Mrs MacLeish is coming with him or not.

Since he was graduated from Harvard law school in 1919, all the time he's been achieving his reputation as a poet, Mr. MacLeish hasn't spent very much time in his home town. He lives sometimes in Paris, then in Antibes for a while, and then he comes back again to this country. Just now he and Mrs. MacLeish are with her father, Mr. Hitchcock, in Farmington, Conn., and they have a farm up in the Connecticut hills where they go on week-ends.

Arts Club Opens Own Show of Work by Its Members.

The Arts club, which has done so much to broaden appreciation of art by bringing to the central states the work of artists from other parts of the world, held open house yesterday to open the annual show of its own members. The galleries which have harbored European and eastern works are now crowded with 114 pieces of "home talent" paintings and sculpture.

The high tea that ushered in the show yesterday was from 4 until 7 o'clock, and about 300 members and guests strolled through the rooms with catalog in hand. An orchestra played in the reception room, and the club waiters were kept busy serving from two long tables—one in the main gallery, decorated with two urns of white carnations, white and yellow stock, and tea roses, and one on the stage set with a bowl of red tulips and yellow tapers.

Probably because his lecture on modern art last winter was so enlightening as to convert some of the iron-bound conservatives, Frederic Clay Bartlett's two entries, "Art School" and "Fish," roused a lot of attention. Other exhibitors included Anita Willets Burnham, one of whose entries is a sunlighted scene on the beach in Wilmette; Robert Lee Eskridge, Joseph P. Ireng, Frances Badger Reichmann, John Sterrs, Increase Robinson, Gerald A. Frantz, Charles Fabens Kelley, Lydia Shaw Judson, who has done a sculptured model for an electric power plant; Pauline Palmer, Alfred Shaw, Yvonne Pryor, Elisabeth Telling, whose sketch of Dame Rachel Crowdy was used by the English Speaking union; Cornelia Weyburn, Katherine Wolcott, and Cecil Clark Davis, whose portrait of Clive Runnells Jr. seemed to be much admired.

Wise Parent Knows When Opposition Is Poor Weapon

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

A knowledge of human nature is merely a synonym for psychology. An elderly aunt of mine had a favorite story she tells to glorify a father whom she adored. It was fresh in her mind after 60 years.

Her mother was a beautiful but strict and distant woman. Her father a brilliant, warm man who knew human nature—and his daughter.

One day a stormy family scene took place. It had been discovered by her mother that my aunt, then about 16 years, had been secretly writing and receiving love letters by a most elaborate arrangement from a romantic young Cuban whom she had been forbidden by her mother to see.

Later in the day her father called her into the library and said:

"So you're very much in love with young Rodriguez?

His daughter nodded vehemently.

"Does it mean a great deal to you to hear from him?"

More nods.

"Well, I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll have a secret pact—you and I. You write to him once a week and tell him to send his replies to my office, addressed to you— and I'll bring them home—unopened, of course. How would you like that?"

My aunt used to end the story. "In a month I'd lost all interest. I found that half the attraction was created by the secrecy and opposition. Wasn't my father clever?"

I'll say he was.

ENGAGEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph G. Coburn of Greenwich and New York, formerly of Lake Forest, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Louise Gage Coburn, to Henry K. Harding, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Harding of Boston and Palm Beach. Miss Coburn attended Miss Porter's school at Farmington, and made her debut in 1927. Mr. Harding attended St. George's school and was graduated in 1927 from Princeton, where he was a member of the Ivy and Varsity clubs. He is finishing an architectural course at the University of Pennsylvania this spring and the wedding is to take place in early June.

PARIS, April 19.—Mrs. Leila Morse Rummel, daughter of the inventor of the telegraph, Samuel F. B. Morse, celebrated her 80th birthday here this month.

"You see," she said, "the telegraph was working and perfected several years before I was born, so I, naturally, can't tell you much about the experiments. However, I shall never forget hearing my father tell about them. I remember him keenly: A handsome man, tall and erect.

"Don't forget that my father was really a painter—a recognized artist. He was past 40 when he started his experiments with telegraphy. And he worked 12 years before his dream came true. They were lean, hard years for my father. He was obliged to borrow from his friends. He could not convince the government there was anything in telegraphy. Congressman and other officials took the view that an electric wire sending dots and dashes was all very well for a lady to call her maid from the kitchen but had no practical value.

"It was one midnight, about 1840, that he received word that congress had finally voted $80,000 for the construction of the first telegraph line, between Washington and Baltimore. I remember his recalling what a thrill it was, how it came when things looked their blackest. It was much later, May 24, 1844, and after much more worry that the first message was sent."

Mrs. Rummel said her father offered all the rights in his invention to the government for $100,000, but was refused, even after the Washington-Baltimore line was working perfectly.

"My father didn't foresee the telegraph's growth to the telephone and radio," Mrs. Rummel said, "but he helped plan and supervise the laying of the first cable.

"I remember one gratification in my father's life," she continued, glancing up at a striking portrait of the inventor by George Baker near the end of Morse's life. "It was the way he was honored when we visited Europe. I feel this recognition must have compensated for much of the wealth he might have had."

Mrs. Rummel first came to Paris with her father in 1866 and has lived here permanently since 1912. Staying during the bombardments by Big Bertha, she was decorated for work for France.

Belts Featured as Newest Style Note

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Separate belts are the most important accessories to new spring fashions. You must wear at least one, if you are to be in style, while Mainbocher, Cheruit, and Vionnet often give you two in the same place and Lanvin's girdles are usually three in number.

Sketched today are a few of the thousand odd new belts that Paris is using to pep up the spring effect.

Beside it appear Mainbocher's double belts of velvet ribbon tied in bows at the left side. The top one is pink and the bottom one brown, and on a white dress nothing could be prettier.

In the center are Lanvin's triple crush belts, each with its own buckle covered with its own fabric, worn one over the other so that only a narrow strip of the two inside ones shows at the top. The inner one is in Irish green wool; the center one is in cream colored wool and the outside one is in black satin. They're to be worn with a cream wool frock and a cream, green and black striped jacket.

Beside it is Patou's wide crush belt of patent leather. He shows them with many of his new evening gowns as well as with daytime costumes.

Pastor Asks People to Help God in Making World Better

If we could elect God as we elect a mayor, what sort of a God would we elect? This was the question propounded at the Sunday Evening club meeting last night in Orchestra hall by Henry Sloane Coffin. He is president of the Union Theological seminary, New York.

"Above all a God who willed a friendly world and a God sufficiently able to bring his will to power," was his answer.

"We look out on the world and its miseries. God cannot be satisfied with things as they are. The greatest inspiration one has is that God needs his help to make the old world a better world.

"We hear of God as a projection of our own thought of a father.

"But when you try to understand even a human being you have to project your own mind. That is just the method we have to employ to understand."

WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Charles I. Daily of 7516 Essex avenue announce the marriage of their niece, Miss Allene Lyle, of 118 East Oak street, to Payson Pearre, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Pearre of Pontiac, Ill. The ceremony took place yesterday morning at the Buena Memorial church. Mr. and Mrs. Pearre are to reside at 2600 Lake View avenue.

Bishop Stewart Dedicates New Winnetka Church

Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago yesterday dedicated the new $450,000 chapel, parish house and rectory of Christ Episcopal church, Winnetka. Bishop Stewart was assisted in the ceremonies by the Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard, rector of Christ church, the Rev. Dr. Stephen E. Keeler, rector of St. Chrysostom's and bishop elect of Minnesota, and other prominent clergymen of the diocese.

THE CLICK OF THE GATE

By Alice Campbell

SECRET PLANS.

A taxi driven at demoniac speed hurtled southward along the Boulevard Raspail, slithered dangerously round a few sharp turnings, and burst like a rocket into a secluded passage.

Here, in front of a tiny pavilion, a man and a woman alighted. The former, a tall, angular Englishman of soldierly bearing, fingered over a medley of the strange coinage France has produced since the war, while his companion, slight, black-clad, unobtrusively smart, cast a searching glance this way and that, then quickly entered the gate and with an air of ownership began fumbling in her bag for a latchkey.

It was the early edge of an October evening. Street lamps threw bright splashes upon an empty pavement along which the chill breeze rattled a handful of dancing leaves, but round the pavilion itself dense gloom gathered like a pall, giving its spick-and-span front a look of desolation.

Detached houses are rare in Paris, and it was odd to come upon this little row of them in the heart of a populous flat district, snuggled together like forgotten toys. A very small row indeed, for the passage from end to end measured but a scant two hundred yards. Opposite, brooding and dark, stretched the blind wall of an oratory and convent school. Aloof, austere, it dominated the view, stern censor of its neighbors' harmless frivolity.

The taxi clattered away, and in the sudden hush the Englishman's tread echoed on the flags. At the doorstep he looked back, vaguely distrustful.

"Picturesque and all that," he muttered grudgingly, "but I don't know that I like your living so far out. It's too remote—and what you have to pass through to get to it!"

"Nonsense," she retorted, amused. "It's only three minutes beyond the Denfert Rochereau—quite accessible, really. And then the atmosphere! You can't deny it."

His hand, a big bony one, closed possessively over hers.

"And also in the Rue de la Paix," she reminded him lightly, opening the door. "No, don't do that here. Come inside." And with a slightly apprehensive air she slipped into the black interior and reached for the electric switch.

Before she could touch the button she was smothered in an embrace which took away her breath. A pair of lips found hers, her heart missed a beat, and presently her arms stole upward to encircle the strong neck bent to bridge the difference in their heights. For a full sixty seconds nothing stirred save the throbbing of their pulses. Then somewhat dizzily they broke apart, and hand in hand, like guilty children, they groped their way into the room on the left, lit by the red flicker of a wood fire.

Here in a shaded lamp's glow they faced each other smiling, radiant, but a hidden observer might have noticed that while the man's manner was triumphantly confident there was that in the woman's which betokened lack of assurance, timidity amounting almost to fear.

"Why are you nervous about having me here?" he inquired, gently stroking her cheek. "I can see you are."

"Am I?" A tremor vibrated in her voice. "There's no reason. As I told you, Clare is acting in a little play at her school—she's being brought home by friends—and my bonne is off for the evening. We're quite alone."

With one minute exception affecting the r's, her English was flawless. Only this slight peculiarity revealed the fact that while she had spoken both languages from childhood French was her native tongue.

In appearance as in speech she showed an equal mingling of her dual heritage. Her coloring was pure Saxon, with the fair, transparent skin, deep sea-blue eyes and cendre hair so much admired by Gallic connoisseurs of beauty; but her body, slender, but not thin, was more delicately molded than the usual Englishwoman's, wrists, limbs and shoulders as finely turned as those of the Venus di Medici.

The smartness of her dress was typically Parisian. All black, her severe coat, faced with sleek fur, opened to reveal a narrow satin frock, without ornament, perfectly fitting; her close hat, shaped like a little helmet, was secured in front by a glittering brooch. She wore stockings of cobweb texture, and across her insteps small black suède shoes fastened with tiny buckles. Each detail of her attire was arresting, skillfully contrived; yet somehow she managed to carry off the whole with naturalness rather than sophistication, and there, perhaps, her English blood told.

The man, Alan Charnwood by name, was her senior by five years, but looked considerably older. Muscular and lean, he had the upright carriage and hard vigor which spoke of an outdoor life and no slacking. His features were remarkable, the nose high bridged but slightly snub, steel-blue eyes netted round with a fine criss-cross because they had been much in the hot sun; skin a healthy red-bronze. His mouth suggested a moderate temper, the teeth were excellent, and he wore a small grizzled mustache, cut very short, as was also the brown-black hair, retreating from his forehead with a hint of coming baldness.

Enrolled in the royal engineers, with the rank of major, he busied himself in peacetime with the building of dams and like enterprises, but he had seen active service in Flanders and for a short time had been attached to the new Arab army in Persia. There in brief you have him, and I, for one, like him very much indeed.

He gazed down upon his love with a sort of fascination, as though he could never grow accustomed to the way in which she differed from other women. At last, laughing and embarrassed, she tore her eyes away, but as she stooped to lay a fresh log on the fire and to rearrange the coffee tray set ready on a stool, he followed each of her movements with a faint lingering smile.

"How long have we got before the child comes home?" he asked, comparing his watch with the columned Louis Seize clock on the mantel. "It's nine now, worse luck!"

"O, Clare won't be here till after you've gone. It's much better she doesn't know about us just yet."

"Why? There's no harm in her knowing, is there?" he demanded bluntly.

"Of course not." She sighed, finding it difficult to explain just what she meant. "But even if I cautioned her she might let something drop to my aunt, inadvertently, you know, and that would cause trouble."

"Is the comtesse such an ogre then?"

"Darling, no! I—I can't possibly make you understand, I'm afraid. Tante Victoire belongs to the old régime, she has the strictest sort of ideas about things, and having brought me up she thinks she owns me, body and soul . . . There, make yourself comfortable. I am only going to take off my coat and hat."

She ran quickly out, and on the floor above he could hear her light step, the only sound in the little house save the fire, staccato crackle.

He drew a deep breath. Barely an hour and a half, then he would have to be going—cutting himself in two and leaving the best part behind—that is what it amounted to. Strange that after only three short months he could feel like that about a woman. It was something he had never experienced before, never thought to experience. Still he must go. His leave was up, he was on his way back to East Africa, to the big job still many months from completion. He had snatched two days in Paris en route for Marseilles and tonight, after dining in a quiet restaurant, they had come on here to Iris' abode to spend their final moments alone together.

If only he could have seized her as she was, swept her off with him to Uganda! However, there was an obstacle to be removed, and even if it had not existed it was doubtful if Iris would have left her little girl behind. No, there was nothing to be done but get on with his work while she, remaining here, arranged her own life so that by next year they could be married. Next year—August or September, he hoped—and after that no more separations.

Lighting a cigaret, he glanced about him.

The small salon was characteristic of its owner, he reflected. There were odds and ends of French furniture, good but not precious; chairs covered with old brocade; a refectory table with a strip of ancient embroidery down its center, and a lamp fashioned from a bulbous bottle of blue glass and shaded with parchment-tinted taffeta; a porcelain bowl containing the blush roses he had brought yesterday.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

An Informal Reception.

Left alone in charge of a physician's office during the dinner hour, I rolled one of my stockings down to the ankle in order to paint a bruise on my leg, thinking that I would let the iodine dry while I went about my duties. I was in one of the back rooms when the telephone rang and I rushed out with one stocking down and the other up, to find two male patients waiting in the reception room. V. S.

A Word of Help.

My most embarrassing moment occurred while riding on a crowded street car. The strange young man sitting next to me was working on a cross word puzzle. I became absorbed in his progress and as he paused over a word I supplied it aloud. Needless to say I got off at the next stop and left the crowd grinning. G. L.

THE SIXTH JOURNEY

INSTALLMENT XLIX.

SECURITY AT LAST.

Judith Falconer lay in the bath on a September morning looking at the water which the sunlight and the green curtains made just the color of the sea. She loved this bathroom and the squashy mat which she had helped to buy. She loved everything in this perfect house, and each day awoke to the joyful remembrance that it was her home.

By now she could put almost everything in it into French and a good deal into Latin, but these games were no longer a secret defense against distress. She played them with two bigger children, who often seemed much younger than she, and who were busily teaching her to laugh. It would be very necessary to know how to do that, they told her, when next week she went off to school.

It was to be the very same school to which Hilary herself had gone when she was thirteen, which was wonderful to Judy, for suppose she had gone at twelve or fourteen instead? Secretly she knew it would not have seemed half so splendid. She would be in Hilary's house, too, and might even sleep in her old room and sit at her old desk, and Hilary had told her everything she could remember about school, both the good things and the bad. Judy felt armed against the bad ones by the knowledge that Hilary had been through them, too. A family, she thought happily, was a great comfort.

Her family considered she had a talent for drawing. Aunt Gertrude, they said, had been quite wrong. [Judy never had to see her now, and she was rather glad.] Her father, who could draw anything in the world, had been giving her lessons, and she was to join the art classes at school. Long ago she had finished the picture of the stone gateway with the two stone beasts for Clive, and he was coming today for the last week of the holidays. Prue, Tim and Jemima were to drive down for him to Haydon and deliver him at Greenwood, and another thing that Judy was pleased about was that Jemima would sit in the garage here when Tim went up to Oxford until he could collect her again at Christmas time.

There had been argument about this. Tim, when he came back from abroad, had said he could not run Jemima any longer and she must go back to her maker, but Judy's father had marched him off round the garden, talking earnestly, and when they came back Jemima's life was saved.

Judy was very glad, for if Jemima and Tim had not brought her Prue and a ten shilling note one dreadful day, where would she be by now?

She did not know whether any one else had thought of this, but she would ask Hilary some time, for they often mentioned the farm.

Though she did not know it, Judith was learning the strangest lesson of all—she was learning to talk. Here, where she had found security at last, there were no questions she dared not ask—no fears that she must lock away.

Going round the house with Hilary each morning arranging flowers and discussing very earnestly what it would be nice to eat, consulting with Rogers about the garden, exploring the country lanes and woods, a new world had opened before her eager mind, a world where one might, even at thirteen, wonder and reason and inquire and never hear "How dare you!" or "That is for me to say."

The seven barren years behind her had fashioned for her one gift after all—the constant sweet surprise of being loved, which, perhaps, she would never wholly lose [as those who have been poor and come to riches forever experience the comfort of a balance in the bank]. In none of her dearest dreams had she thought to ask for that, and the constant wonder brought her own love out of hiding and filled her days. In this undemanding quality, as in her response to beauty and form, she was certainly her father's daughter, and now she could remember her old love for the Hampstead house without regret, as though she had gone one step towards the knowledge that beauty is imperishable and never to be lost by those who have eyes to see. The two who had given their first summer together to the task of shutting, as far as might be, from her memory every trouble she had known, little guessed the passion of protective tenderness they had awakened in its place. Books, pipes, newspapers, handkerchiefs appeared in her hand almost before one or other had expressed a wish for them; yet they had only to look preoccupied for her to be off on her own affairs until a surprised and loud inquiry, "Where on earth is that mouse?" brought she smiling back.

She thought her father a marvelous being, and she was proud of him, but Hilary was the fount of all wisdom and her intimate friend.

There was almost nothing she could not say to Hilary now, but there was one thing she wanted to say which she had not said. Some day she'd say it. Judy always smiled when she remembered this.

A footstep came along the passage and she lay very quiet. Somebody rattled the door.

"Judy, you ruffian, are you still in the bath?" cried Hilary's voice. "Do you want a pair of nigger parents today then?"

The whale jumped out, fell into a large towel and presently into a rose pink dressing gown, then began very carefully to mop the splashes up.

"Whatever are you doing, you funny whale?" asked Hilary, poking her head in the door.

"Making it dry for you," said a loving voice, and the mat was laid down again.

"O, thank you, Sir Walter Raleigh," said Queen Elizabeth, stepping grandly into the middle of it. "Now, then, Walter Raleigh, where are your manners? You haven't kissed the queen good morning!"

"O, Hilary, you are an ass," sighed Judy happily.

She had said it at last.

THE END.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., April 19.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover will return from their week-end outing at their fishing camp on the Rapidan in time for Mrs. Hoover to go to the opening of the D. A. R. congress tomorrow morning in Constitution hall, where the Daughters are expecting her to give them a greeting.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover Jr. returned to Asheville to join her husband when the President and Mrs. Hoover left for Rapidan. Mrs. Hoover Jr. had spent a week at the White House with her children, who are there until the family returns to their California home.

The retiring Spanish ambassador and Senora De Padilla, having recalled invitations for a large dinner party last night, entertained Lucrezia Bori informally at dinner. Miss Bori scored a triumph in two out of the three Metropolitan company's performances last week. She joined the dinner guests afterward of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilkins and went with them to the last meeting of "the dancing class" sponsored by Mrs. Joseph Leiter, which took place at the clubhouse of the defunct Montgomery Country club.

The secretary of state and Mrs. Stimson have out cards for a reception from 4:30 to 6:30 Wednesday afternoon at Woodley in honor of the delegates to the second Pan-American conference of directors of health and the members of the directing council of the Pan-American sanitary bureau.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

"I'm doing public health work," writes F. G., "and three years ago I was advised to reduce. I weighed 180 pounds. I am 5½ feet tall. I went through the regular routine, having a metabolism test taken, etc., and was under the care of one of the best internal medicine men in the city. I did not lose weight, although I was on a diet of approximately 1,000 calories per day, until I had several grains of thyroid along with the diet.

"After several weeks I lost fifteen pounds, but I was so miserable I could hardly work. Later on I developed arthritis, which laid me up for several months with a bill for $1,100 and a few pounds of weight lost.

"Many doctors agree that thyroid changes the blood chemistry and arthritis can be directly attributed to a change in blood. I am one of those people who has always been heavy; even as a child I was stocky.

"One of the difficulties I find is to discover places where one can get hairdressing in a style appropriate for a heavy, mature woman, also where I can find styles in clothes and hats. I believe some one who would cater to women who do not want to ape the flapper of 16 could make a comfortable living. I'm talking about the sizes 42 to 44, particularly, that will not make you look like a flapper nor yet like 65. Also, my search is for a beauty parlor that will make you look your age—not kittenish nor old ladyish."

The first hand experience with thyroid, though given under what would appear most favorable circumstances, indicates the danger that lies in its indiscriminate use for reducing. In spite of many warnings, certain women, I know, do go in for what they think is a quick and easy way of shedding excess weight.

There are shops that cater to large women, and some stores have departments with the same service in mind. And if a client went into one of the high grade beauty salons I'm sure her coiffure needs would be met, too. But the thing is to hold out and not to be persuaded against your own better judgment.

FARM AND GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER

NEW GARDEN TOOL STYLES.

A hoe and a spade or fork once was standard equipment for the average small lot gardener, but modernism has entered into even this old time recreation with its resultant harvest of home grown fresh vegetables.

True, the kitchen used to be called upon to provide some of the smaller weeding implements, but even this custom has become out of date.

Take trowels, for instance, on the suggestion of the National Garden bureau. There are narrow ones for small holes used in transplanting cabbages and tomatoes; there are large ones for planting shrubs and large rooted plants, and there are long bladed types for use during bulb planting time.

Weeders apparently offer the greatest variety. Cutters and scratchers are the terms used by supply houses in dividing weeders into two classes. In the first class is the angle bladed instrument that has a good cutting edge to shave off chickweed, pusley, and other tough rooted types of weeds. The asparagus cutter can be used for ridding gardens and lawns of taprooted plants like the dandelion, dock, burdock, and plantain.

Digging out the perennial weeds and keeping the surface soil scratched up will discourage weeds. An early start on the problem saves much work later. In the larger gardens many find it convenient to employ a wheel hoe that covers the ground satisfactorily and eliminates much back bending.

...Col. McCormick's committee in the ...last three years had directed its at... ...tention particularly to the so-called ...anti-gag law, which authorizes ...courts to enjoin from publication ...newspapers which the court may re... ...gard as scandalous and scurrilous. ...The publishers maintain that such ...legislative power is a threat against ...all newspapers and that no court ...should have the power of suppression ...under any condition, inasmuch as they ...are liable criminally and financially ...under the ordinary libel laws.

...The Minnesota law is at issue be... ...cause it has been invoked to enjoin a ...newspaper of that state from publica... ...tion and the injunction has been up... ...held by the Supreme court of Minne... ...sota. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE initiated ...a fight on that decision and with the ...support of the A. N. P. ...Col. McCormick is expected to pre... ...sent an interesting report on the sub... ...ject inasmuch as the case has reached ...the highest tribunal of the country ...before the last annual meeting of the ...association.

LISBON, Portugal, April 19.—The revolt against the Portuguese government in the Azores ended today when rebels on both San Miguel and Terceira islands surrendered to government troops, their leaders taking flight. Not a shot was fired. Martial law has been declared and censorship set up.

A wireless message from the commander of the punitive expedition to the Azores, stated that the rebels at Angra do Herosimo, Terceira, surrendered. The town is occupied by government troops, and the civil governor has returned. Another message from the cruiser Vasco da Gama, sent to the Azores to put down the trouble, stated that the Ponta Delgada garrison on San Miguel, surrendered quietly at 5 o'clock this morning to government forces.

The governor of San Miguel cabled that the rebel chiefs have taken flight on the cruiser Pero Allenguer, which is supposed to be heading for the Canary islands. Portuguese warships are in pursuit.

UPSTATE CRIMES IN NEW YORK LAID TO RUM RUNNERS

New York, April 19.—(AP)—Murder and torture were being investigated in two upstate communities today and behind them authorities professed to see the hand of a rum running gang.

A body believed to be that of Harry Western, who disappeared from his home near Kingston last August, was taken out of a private pond at East Fishkill. It had been weighted down with an iron grate.

At about the same time Grover Parks told a story of having been beaten and tortured by alleged members of Jack "Legs" Diamond's gang. BURKE IS LIKELY TO PLEAD GUILTY AS POLICE KILLER

St. Joseph, Mich., April 19.—[Special.]—Fred Burke, characterized by police as the most dangerous criminal in America, probably will plead guilty in the Circuit court here this week to the murder of Patrolman Charles Skelly. Burke was recently captured after a nation-wide hunt.

This information was learned from an authentic source last night. Burke originally was scheduled to be arraigned tomorrow before Judge Charles White, but because of the jurist's illness the hearing was postponed to later in the week. Burke declined to comment on the probable plea of guilty. His attorney, Charles W. Gore, asserted no statement would be made until the arraignment.

However, reports are Burke will plead affirmatively to an information charging murder. Evidence will be heard by Judge White to determine Burke's degree of guilt. If it is first degree, life in prison will be given. If second degree any number of years from one to life will be prescribed.

BANKER'S SON DIES AS FLAMES DESTROY HOME; OTHERS ESCAPE

New York, April 19.—[Special.]—John P. Schley, 12 years old, son of Reeves Schley, a vice president of the Chase National bank, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed the Schley summer home at Somerville, N. J., early this morning. A fireman's attempts to rescue the boy proved futile.

The fire was discovered by a servant. Mr. Schley was awakened and roused his family. The banker, his wife and two other children fled from the house, lightly clad, but John, apparently confused, remained in his room.

The family was outside the burning structure several minutes before it was discovered that the youth had not escaped. A volunteer fireman climbed a ladder to the boy's room and shouted for him to come to the window, but apparently the youth did not understand.

John's body was found in bed with several burned blankets wrapped tightly around him.

CARPENTIER AND DEMPSEY JUDGE GOLDEN GLOVES

They'll Work French Bouts May 12.

BY ARCH WARD.

When the Golden Glove champions of America battle the toughest amateurs in France at Soldiers' field May 12, their work will be officially appraised by gentlemen who know something about boxing.

GEORGES CARPENTIER.

Jack Dempsey, the fistic idol of the United States, and Georges Carpentier of France, who were the principals in the first of the late Tex Rickard's million dollar enterprises, will be the judges at the international bouts.

Dempsey is hunting and fishing—and maybe waiting for a divorce—in Reno, Nev., but has promised to interrupt his stay long enough to visit Chicago for the show at Soldiers' field.

"I wouldn't miss the opportunity to work in the Golden Glove bouts for anything," Jack said the day he left for Reno. "They are the greatest amateur boxing has had. If the match with France draws less than 100,000 fans I shall be disappointed. The whole country is talking Golden Gloves."

Ticket Sale Opens.

The ticket sale opened yesterday. Orders will be accepted by mail until 21,000 seats have been sold. This number constitutes the ringside section. There will be 100,000 tickets placed on sale at 50 cents each the day of the bouts. In case of rain or cold weather, the show will be moved indoors to Chicago Stadium, where the lucky 21,000 will be accommodated.

Revel Egan, THE TRIBUNE'S Paris sport correspondent, warns Chicago fans that their boxing favorites are in for a stormy evening the night they go up against the champions of France. He writes:

"While watching the French national amateur tournament last night I was impressed by two things. One was the extraordinary speed of the fighters, and the other was their remarkable polish. Their speed can be partially explained by their fine condition. All were in shape to travel three rounds without a letdown. Frenchmen as a rule are naturally fast.

Better than Professionals.

"The science and ringcraft displayed by these amateurs astonished me. There was no pushing and hauling, clinching or hesitation in breaking. When the referee said break—the English word is used—the boys would break cleanly, step back and then go at it again, hammer and tongs.

"'Are these boys really amateurs?' I asked a member of the French Boxing federation.

"'Most certainly. Why do you ask?' he shot back.

"'Because I have seen professionals at Hallé Wagram and the Velodrome d'Hiver who didn't look nearly so good.'"

Warns Americans.

Mr. Egan, who never has seen Nick Bolakba punch an opponent around the body or Don Gonzales shoot his left to a foe's chin, goes on to say:

"I don't think you realize what your boys are up against. I think it is only fair to tell you, so you can prepare for the worst and look around now for alibis. The champions of Chicago and New York will not be fighting against Paris alone. They will be battling the best talent in France, which means the toughest and most skillful of nearly 50,000,000 souls. Your Golden Gloves team is going to

White Sox Bats Rout Four St. Louis Pitchers, 12 to 6

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., April 19.—The White Sox found themselves embarrassed by more than pitching today, but they refused to surrender. They made up for the deficiency by applying their bats at regular intervals and in that way defeated the Browns in a game that was almost washed away by a cloudburst in the second inning. The score was 12 to 6, and 10,000 citizens, who appeared because previous deeds of the Killefer boys had steamed up latent interest, naturally were sorely disappointed. They said as much before going home.

The high spot in the procession of mud bespattered Sox runners across the plate was the seventh inning. By that time Tommy Thomas had been knocked out again and Hal McKain was nearing a similar finish. Things also had fared badly with Sam Gray, but he, at least, had a tie in his grasp. That is, he had it until the Sox blasted him loose from his job in the seventh and treated Rescuer Kimsey sufficiently rough to make the inning net five runs. Later the Chicagoans scored some more off Stiles, but this wasn't necessary.

Blue Leads Attack.

Quite a number of Bush's boys shared in the pleasure of grieving the 10,000 spectators. Lu Blue, who until recently was under local management, figured in three scoring episodes with two singles and a double.

Luke Appling came to life and whacked the ball safely three times. Fred Eichrodt, who was planted in left field, delivered a timely triple and single. Bill Cissell assisted with a three bagger and double, and Garland Braxton, who was summoned to relieve McKain in the seventh, turned out a job of slow balling that hardly could have been improved.

Thomas wasted no time in the first inning demonstrating that he was not exactly the real Thomas. Levey, the first man to face him, walked. Burns, also a rookie, singled. Schulte boomed a hit past Kamm to score Levey and put Burns on third. Kress then flied to Eichrodt in left field foul territory and Burns scored. Jenkins added a single, and it looked as if the rally might go on forever, but Tommy squared off and stopped the next two batters.

The profitable Sox second, which started at 3:15 o'clock and continued exactly one hour and fifteen minutes later, began with Levey's boot of Cissell's grounder. Kamm walked, Appling fanned and Tate walked to fill the bases. Rain began to trickle down at this stage, but it was slight, so Umpire in Chief Moriarty displayed no visible signs of being annoyed. Meanwhile Boss Bush explained to Thomas that it was a good spot for a pinch hitter. So Watwood batted for Tommy, but after two balls had been pitched to him the deluge hit the park and as many as possibly could sneaked for cover, but not many succeeded.

Fans Shed Shirts.

The downpour subsided after about fifteen minutes and the ground manicurists and spectators alike went to work. The park employés sprinkled an entire new layer of earth over the infield. The work engaged in by the customers, at least those in the open face bleachers, was of a more personal nature. Some of them removed their wet shirts and waved them in the breeze. Others simply altered the arrangement of attire by wearing shirt tails out after the manner of a Chinese laundryman.

When the job of getting things in playing shape had been completed Watwood slammed a hard grounder to Burns and was retired, but Cissell scored. Blue poked a long fly to left and Bettencourt, who was guarding that sector, was so deeply mired in Walberg Shades Ruffing in Hurling Duel.

New York, April 19.—(AP)—Before a huge Sunday crowd, Rube Walberg bested Charley Ruffing in a pitching duel today to give the Philadelphia Athletics a 3 to 2 victory over the Yankees in their series opener today. The attendance was announced as 80,403, the second largest crowd in baseball history. The all-time attendance record for baseball was set at the Stadium on Sept. 9, 1928, when 85,265 spectators saw the Yanks beat the Athletics in both ends of a double header.

Walberg allowed six hits and Ruffing seven. A home run by Jimmy Dykes broke a 1 to 1 tie in the seventh inning and Bishop's double and Haas' single in the eighth produced the run that won the game. Lou Gehrig hit his second homer of the year in the last half of the eighth with none on base. Score:

TIGERS TRIM INDIANS, 7-2.

Cleveland, O., April 19.—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers outslugged the hard hitting Cleveland Indians today for a 7 to 2 victory in the first game of the series.

Getting a single besides his homer in four times at bat, Vosmik saw his batting average sink to a mere .667. His 12 hits out of 18 trips include a home run, triple, five doubles and five singles.

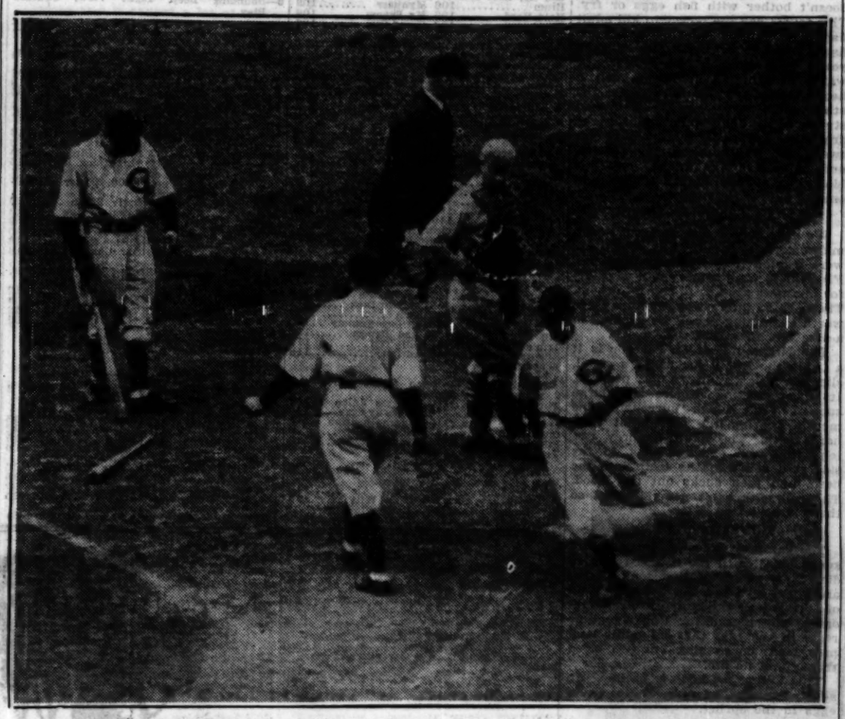
ALL THE RUNS CHARLEY ROOT NEEDED



Kiki Cuyler and Woody English race across the plate in the first inning with the runs that assured the Cubs victory over the Cardinals yesterday. Gabby Hartnett's single with two out enabled these fleet Cubs to reach the counting station. Twenty Grand—None Better Among 3 Year Old Racers

BY FRENCH LANE.

Come on, faithful old binoculars with your magic focus which extends six months into the future of horse racing. Don't fail in this crisis!

Don't let that dense cloud of dust hinder your view. Don't allow the tap-a-tap-tap of pounding hoof beats get your mind off the business of the day. Don't let those wild bursts of applause influence you.

For this is a horse race we are looking at today—a horse race that may have a close finish. It is the battle for the 3 year old championship—a combat that may stir the country before a title is decided.

Ten or a dozen colts capable of winning a championship in any ordinary year are in the thick of the fight. Fleet colts, brave and game colts ready to run their hearts out to capture a championship, are stirring up that cloud of dust. It is their hoof beats you hear at this early stage of the struggle.

It's Not Equipoise.

Well, strange to say, Mr. Binoculars doesn't shout back at me, "It's Equipoise all the way."

You can't get around the fact that this wiry, rugged, long legged Equipoise might be deserving of the title. He has met all comers since he came to the races early last year as a 2 year old.

If sentiment alone would decide the 3 year old championship, the horse in front would be Equipoise. But stout bones, strong muscles, heart, and courage make thoroughbred champions. I will not deny Equipoise his big heart, nor his indomitable will to win. But I don't believe those frail, fleet legs of his will stand up through a championship struggle after the campaign he engaged in as a 2 year old.

Long List of Tests.

This doesn't mean that he won't win a Preakness, a Kentucky Derby, or perhaps some of the other early 3 year old specials. But the championship struggle extends a long way beyond those exciting events this year. There's a Belmont to fight for, an American Derby, Arlington's Classic—the richest 3 year old stake run in the world—a Travers at Saratoga, a Lawrence Realization at Belmont and a Latonia championship before a coronation ceremony can be arranged.

Can Equipoise, the colt which raced from Bowie to Bowie last year or from early April to late November making 16 starts in the most grueling campaign ever tried by a topnotch 2 year old, march on through to victory?

I don't think so.

And I believe Twenty Grand is the horse that will finish ahead of him. Instigator, unknown to American turf crowds because he raced last year in England, will be right there. And Jamestown, which probably will have the easiest campaign of all the first flight 3 year olds, will have to be beaten.

How They Rank.

Twenty Grand, Instigator and Jamestown. That's the way the 3 year old race will end if the faithful old binoculars are not spoofing me.

Now I know the followers of Insco, Mate, Vander Pool, Siskin, Pittsburgher, Ormesby, Prince d'Amour, Spanish Play, Surf Board and the backers of a score of other 3 year olds are ready to call an indignation meeting.

But the first bit of philosophy I ever heard around a race track was "It's a difference of opinion that makes horse racing."

In the crowd of also rans just named, Pittsburgher looms up as the most formidable. Horses bred along his lines—Exterminator and In Memoriam, for instance—were great 3 year olds yet considered only ordinary as 2 year olds. Insco and Vander Pool were unsound when their 2 year old duties ended last fall. Crippled horses can't win this kind of a 3 year old championship chase was on, but they may flash greatness at times.

Mate Extended in 1930.

Mate's handicap is the same as that of Equipoise. His 2 year old campaign was too strenuous. He started 15 times and was out of the money in only one race. Surf Board may surprise. Spanish Play and Prince d'Amour come from the winter tracks. This 3 year old battle will be too grueling for a winter track horse to get very far.

Now let's look up the new champion, Twenty Grand. His was an easy campaign last year. In eight starts he won four races, was second twice, third once and out of the money once. When he beat Equipoise by a nose in the Kentucky Jockey club stakes at Churchill Downs last Oct. 16, he ran the fastest mile a 2 year old ever ran. He ran it in 1:36 and fought a nose and nose battle with Equipoise down the stretch.

A few days earlier he had beaten

Brickies Lose; Soccer Title to New York

The New York Yankees won the national soccer championship by defeating the Chicago Bricklayers at Sparta field yesterday by a score of 2 to 0 in the final game of the series.

Capt. McNab of the Yankees, appearing with his right arm in a sling, won the toss for choice of ends and then retired to the sidelines. A bone in his arm was broken in Saturday's game at Detroit. This injury left the Yankees with only ten available players, but they were enough to beat the Bricklayers.

The Bricklayers opened a strong offensive, forcing a corner in the first minute of play, but nothing came of it. Some end to end play followed with nothing in the way of steady offense from either side. Patenaude put some life in the game when, after 18 minutes, he scored the first goal with a fast shot which went into the net close to the upright, Neate nearly touching the ball.

Changes Affect Brickies.

New York supplied most of the action with Gonsalves and Patenaude trying shots at the goal. Most of their efforts went over the crossbar.

Davidson Fouls Patenaude.

In the curtain raiser, the Maccabee Juniors defeated a picked team of Illinois juniors, 2 to 1. The lineup:

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Our Cubs, led by Charley Root, yesterday showed the champion St. Louis Cardinals a thing or two about this business of going on and on in the 1931 season without suffering a defeat. Charley and the boys slapped down the St. Louisans before an overflow crowd of 43,000. The score was: Cubs, 4; Cards, 1.

Next to the thrill of seeing the Cubs beat their most dangerous enemies, the customers got the biggest kick out of a special clinic designed to demonstrate the fanciful and intricate workings of that unique human contraption, an umpire's brain. The decision didn't really have much to do with the ultimate outcome, but if there was any one of the 43,000 present who understood, unassisted, the ruling on Bottomley in the eighth inning, he may call at our office and get his reward, a handsome last year's calendar with only eleven months missing.

Stephenson Muffs Fly.

The inning opened with a walk to Orsatti, after which Frisch flied to Stephenson. Bottomley then drove the ball to the edge of the overflow crowd in left. Stephenson muffed the ball, and it caromed into the crowd. Umpire Moran ruled that some one had ruined Stephenson's morale by shouting raucously. He called Bottomley out and further ruled that Orsatti could go to third and no farther on the same interference theory.

This confronted the official scorer with the necessity of also indulging in a flight of fancy, for it isn't considered kosher to wish a runner from first to third. So the scorer ruled that in effect Stephenson caught the ball and threw it into the crowd instead of to the infield. This gave Stephenson an error.

But enough of inspired decisions. We have a swell game about which to write and we may as well start off by talking about this fellow Root. The same Mr. Root who allowed the Pirates four hits and struck out five in the opener last Tuesday was slightly more generous yesterday against the champions, for the visitors made six hits and six batsmen fanned. The Cards on the other hand made only half as many runs as the Pirates.

Root Scatters Hits.

Of the six hits off Root, two came in the first inning when the Cards made their lone run. There was one hit in the second inning, one in the third, one in the fifth, and the last one in the ninth. The ninth inning hit was a double into the crowd

DRAKE RELAYS START FRIDAY; 3,000 ENTERED

Penn Games Hold Spotlight for Eastern Teams.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The track and field stars of the west, many of whom contributed to the record breaking performances at the ninth annual relays of the University of Kansas last Saturday, now prepare for the two day program on the week-end at Drake university, Des Moines, Ia. These games mark the twenty-second renewal since their establishment by Maj. John L. Griffith, now commissioner of athletics for the Western conference. Advance information indicates this year's events will exceed all others in interest and records.

JIM BAUSCH.

Drake and the University of Pennsylvania, now well into the fourth decade of its annual carnival, which also is scheduled Friday and Saturday, conduct the nation's outstanding relay meets. It may be unfair to assert Drake's relays are more important than those just concluded at Kansas. However, Drake does have an advantage in prestige, gained largely because the meet is thirteen years older.

The Drake meet is located more advantageously to draw entries from the Western conference. All the Big Ten universities except Ohio State will compete. At Kansas four, Illinois, Indians, Iowa, and Chicago, entered the competition. This is not a normal criterion, however, for adverse financial conditions probably kept away several universities which in other years have been regular attendants at Lawrence.

Drake Retains Prep Events.

Then, too, Drake has retained its high school events, under special sanction of the Iowa High School association and the national federation, which triple the number of contestants. It is estimated this year that 2,000 athletes [including those from 125 secondary schools] are entered. Seventy-five universities and colleges will be represented. These include all the Missouri valley and Big Six, Tulane, Alabama, Washington State, and scattering entries from the gulf to South Dakota.

Considering speed and skill, there is little to choose between Kansas and Drake. A more or less overlapping of entries probably is the answer.

Bausch Wins Decathlon.

The decathlon, which is not contested at Drake, was one of the features of the Kansas relays. And James Bausch, Kansas student now competing for the Kansas City Athletic club, in winning the all around with a point total record for American competition, becomes the leading candidate to represent the United States next summer in the Olympic games. He defeated Wilson Charles, Haskell Indian and National A. A. U. champion, although an error in timing the 1,500 meter run led to announcement that Charles had been the victor, a mistake which was not rectified until the relays were finished.

The ten events of the decathlon are scored according to the records established in 1912 or previous Olympic games. One thousand points is the standard of award for equaling each mark. The actual score of each contestant is determined by deducting a fixed number of points from 1,000 for each fraction of time or distance by which the performance falls below the standard. If the contestant surpasses the mark, points are added to 1,000.

The world's greatest all around athlete is Paavo Yrjola of Finland, who won the Olympic decathlon in 1928.

Bausch's Marks.

Following are the decathlon events, the Olympic 1,000 point standards, and the marks Bausch made last Saturday in creating a new American record:

Fish Battle for Eggs in Fresh Waters

BY BOB BECKER.

Spring and early summer always see a great conflict in the fresh waters of the central states because the predatory fish which feed on the eggs of other species are on the move. The raids of common suckers on the eggs of the wall eyed pike is a good illustration of this battle which goes on during the spring months. Thus in fishing waters there is a clash comparable to that between the quail and the crow or other predatory birds or animals in our game coverts.

But we have one fish killing predator in our lakes and brooks which doesn't bother with fish eggs or fry. This fellow has the power to kill adult fish, and literally tons of fine game fish are killed by his "gangs" each year. The common lamprey is the water denizen which takes such a heavy toll of trout, sunfish, bass, and other game fish every year. When studies of the fish population of a lake are made and the relationships between rough fish, predatory species, and game fish are worked out this bloodthirsty lamprey has to be reckoned.

Are Interesting Specimens.

We have collected these lampreys in midwestern streams when specimens were wanted for laboratory purposes. Fishermen who seine small streams for minnows are apt to run into them. They are so interesting that they are worth examining closely or keeping in a live box to watch their work.

The lamprey isn't an eel nor is it a true fish. But it looks like a small, slim eel, a partly grown one, perhaps. Its most striking feature is a large suction disk which surrounds the mouth, bearing the circlets of tiny, hard teeth. The adult lamprey fastens this well armored disk to the side of a fish, rubs its teeth into the flesh, and then sucks out the blood. The poor fish can't get rid of it, so there is no hope.

Kill Tons of Fish.

The lamprey rides and constantly sucks blood until the fish is ready to die. It is estimated that tons of fish are killed each year in just one group of lakes where the lampreys are abundant. The reason for this slaughter rests in the fact that an adult lamprey feeds on nothing but fish blood throughout its life.

This killing predator is prolific. An adult lamprey lays 25,000 to 35,000 eggs in the spring.

PURPLE BASEBALL TEAM TO MEET HOOSIERS TODAY

Northwestern's baseball team, which split even in its first two conference games, will open its home season against Indiana at Roycemore field in Evanston today. The game will start at 4 o'clock.

The Wildcats got away to a bad start by taking a decisive licking from Illinois in their first Big Ten game but came back to even up matters by defeating Iowa, 10 to 6, Saturday. Today's game will be the first conference clash of the season for the Hoosiers.

Coach Paul Stewart plans to start Buck Fyfe on the mound against Indiana today. The big right hander hurled the first five innings against the Hawks but is expected to be ready to jump back into action today. Lefty Veller, Indiana's all around athlete, will pitch for the visitors. The lineup:

MILLER, PURPLE WRESTLER, SIGNS FOR PRO MATCH

Bob Miller, middleweight on the Northwestern university wrestling team and holder of the Big Ten 155 pound championship, will follow Hank Bruder into the professional ranks tomorrow night.

He will make his pro debut in a match with Tony Kazaciewicz, Polish middleweight champion, at the Congress Arcade. He is also matched with Ted Ross of Iowa at the Fronton Wednesday night.

In addition to holding the Big Ten title Miller is the Central A. A. U. champion in his division. He also has engaged in a number of amateur boxing bouts in Chicago. Two years ago he advanced to the semi-finals in THE TRIBUNE Golden Gloves championships.

Equipoise at a mile at Aqueduct. He never hooked up with Jamestown, the colt which disputes last year's 2 year old title with Equipoise. But he beat Ormesby, Mate, Knights Call, and other leaders.

Twenty Grand is owned by the Greentree stable, which is maintained by Mrs. Payne Whitney, an aunt of C. V. Whitney, owner of Equipoise. For a good many seasons St. Germans has been expected to produce a great distance running race horse, but he failed until he sent Twenty Grand to the races.

BATTLING TWINS ON K. C. AMATEUR CARD TONIGHT

McCurdy's Single Hands Robins Fifth Defeat.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 19.—(AP)—Harry McCurdy's pinch single in the tenth inning off Relief Pitcher Hollis Thurston drove in two runs and gave the Phillies a 6 to 4 decision over the Brooklyn Robins today. Brooklyn, making its first home appearance of the season, suffered its fifth straight defeat.

HARRY McCURDY.

Home runs by Herman and O'Doul gave the Robins an early lead which evaporated in the eighth when the Quakers scored four runs to knock out Clark and resume the lead. Slade's single drove in the tying run in the ninth, but the Robins bowed to a tenth inning rally which started after two were out. Twenty-six thousand fans watched the game. Score:

PIRATES, 5; REDS, 1.

Cincinnati, O., April 19.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates made it two straight over the Cincinnati Reds today, combing Si Johnson for nine hits to win, 5 to 1, and inflict the fifth straight defeat on the Reds, who have not won a game this season.

Boston, Mass., April 19.—(AP)—Fred Fitzsimmons, star right-handed pitcher of the New York Giants, held the Boston Braves to six hits today as the latter lost its first game of the season, 9 to 2, before 30,000 fans.

After mauling Brooklyn hurlers to gain four straight wins the Braves were stopped by Fitzsimmons in all but the third and sixth innings in each of which they made three hits.

Cubs Wallop Cards, 4 to 1, Before 43,000

with which Gelbert led off the session, but the sprightly Card shortstop never got beyond second.

The batting in the Cub scoring innings was done off Flint Rhem by Woody English and Gabby Hartnett in the first inning; by Hack Wilson in the third inning, and Stephenson and Charley Grimm in the sixth inning.

As things turned out, a single by Hartnett drove in enough runs to win the contest, but the later smacking of the others was none the less welcome.

Face Grimes Today.

The clubs will resume their series today. Burleigh Grimes, who won his first start of the season with a 4 to 0, seven hit shutout over the Cincinnati Reds, will pitch for St. Louis. Opposed to him will be Bob Smith.

The Cardinals made their one in the first inning. Douthit walked to get the contest under way. Orsatti fanned, but Frisch singled to right, Douthit stopping at second. The runners advanced on Bottomley's infield out. Then Watkins caromed a red hot one off Grimm's glove. Douthit scored as the ball rolled toward English, but Frisch was ultra-optimistic and thought he could race on home on the small roll. He was mistaken, for Woody picked up the ball and shot it to Hartnett for the third out.

Cuyler Gets on Base.

Cuyler got a pass to start the Cub half of the first and dashed to third on English's single to left center, Woody taking second on the throw in. Hornsby popped to Adams and L. Wilson was called out on strikes. The bases were full when Stephenson drew a pass, which made it a nice dramatic setting for Hartnett, who forthwith responded to the emergency by slamming a single to center, which scored Ki and Woody. Stephenson stopped at second and was forced by Bell on the next play.

In the third Cardinal scoring ambitions were smothered by a handsome double play executed by Cuyler and Hartnett. Bottomley walked with one down and went to third on Watkins' second hit, a single to left center. Then Gelbert flied to Cuyler, and when Bottomley sought to score after the catch has was thrown out at the plate. It was a nice bit of work by both Gabby and Ki, but the brilliance of the performance was Gabby's, for he got the ball four feet to the right of the plate and made a great dive to accomplish the putout.

Wilson Doubles, Scores.

Hornsby got on to start the third when Bottomley juggled his grounder. Wilson doubled into the left field overflow and ground rules stopped Rog at third. The runners held on while Gelbert was throwing out Stephenson. Hartnett tapped to Rhem and Hornsby was trapped between third and home and was out. Hack Wilson took third and Hartnett stopped at first. Wilson scored and Hartnett went to second on a passed ball. Then Gabby stole third, but Bell flied to Watkins.

After going out in order in the fourth and fifth innings, the Cubs got busy in the sixth to the extent of one run. Stephenson singled to left, moved to second on Hartnett's sacrifice, paused on Bell's out and scored on Grimm's double. Root flied to Watkins. That wound up all the scoring for the day.

the mud that he couldn't move. The ball dropped for a double, Kamm and Tate scoring. Simons then singled Blue across with the fourth run of the session, and Reynolds ended it with a hoist to center.

McKain was unable to prevent the Browns from climbing into a tie with two runs in the third. Schulte led off with a single between Kamm and the bag. Kress was thrown out and Jenkins helped himself to a hit, on which Schulte registered. Melillo's double sent Jenkins home. Then Appling's two bagger, Tate's single, and an infield out put the Sox ahead by 5 to 4 in the fourth. The Browns tied it right up again in the home half, one scoring on a pass to Bettencourt and singles by Melillo and Ferrell.

Blue Starts Rally.

The pleasure of starting the big five run splurge in the seventh fell to Blue. He singled to right. Simons took three ineffectual swings. Reynolds beat out a slow roller toward third and when Kress threw wild to first base Blue charged on to third. The firing then became serious. Eichrodt tripled to the wall in right center, Blue and Reynolds scoring. Cissell tripled to the same spot, Eichrodt crossing the plate. Exit Gray in favor of Kimsey. Kamm hit a double to center, Cissell scoring. Kamm moved to third on a scratch hit by Appling and went home on Tate's squeeze bunt.

McKain welcomed the suggestion that he leave after one Brown had scored on doubles by Bettencourt and Melillo to start the home seventh. Braxton stepped in and a boot by Kamm put him in trouble, but he escaped by fanning both Levey and Burns. He whiffed three more in the next two chapters.

Blue was the first Sox batter to face Stiles in the eighth. He singled and Simons sacrificed. Reynolds then doubled. This accounted for the last two runs. It also forced Stiles to turn the job over to Coffman.

Pat Caraway will have a chance tomorrow to show what he's worth. Rip Collins is to be Killefer's choice.

PREP TEAMS TO START BASEBALL SEASON TODAY

Two games will open the City league baseball race this afternoon with Bowen of the south section meeting Fenger on the latter's field and Schurz invading Lake View's grounds in the north division opener. Play in the central and west sections will start tomorrow.

Bowen, which dropped only four games in its 30 game schedule last year, will have five members of the 1930 squad in the lineup.

RING LARDNER HEARS FROM WILLIS CLOUGH

Cincinnati, O., April 19.—Dear Friend, well we arrived here yesterday and last night was the first night I spent with my new room mate Bill Hinchman one of Manager Ens assistance and after breakfast we went to our room to unpack suit cases and Bill says what did you leave your clothes in Chicago and I says no, why, and he says nothing, only all the other boys I ever roomed with I use to have arguments with them which one of us should put their clothes in the dresser and the other in the chauffeur but with you for a room mate I guest I can use the dresser and chauffeur both and you can put your clothes under your pillow.

He also says he was glad to see I wore a nightgown instead of pajamas because he wore pajamas himself and his other room mates had always wore pajamas and it caused a lot of confusion because when one of them woke up in the night and turned the lights on and begin to read he could never tell if it was himself or his room mate.

Dempsey and Carpentier to Judge Fights

meet face to face the cream of the youth of Picardy, Normandy, Brittany, Provence, the Verdun region, and the Alpine slopes where the famous Blue Devils come from.

"The eight champions France is sending to America are the survivors of tournaments at Nice, Marseilles, Bordeaux, Toulouse, Lyons, Lille, Le Havre, Calais and Paris."

If Mr. Egan were aware that the American team is practically a Chicago team, six of the eight fighters having competed in the Chicago meet, he probably would be even more concerned.

One city against a nation. It's unique in the annals of boxing. You have to go back to ancient Rome to find its equal. Under the emperors the Roman gladiators used to take on the champions from Gaul, Britain and other barbarian provinces.

That was a long time ago. But Chicago is willing to prove it can be done again.

New York Girls Win U.S. Swim Championship

New York, April 19.—(AP)—Four days of spectacular performances by Helene Madison, the Seattle nymph, provided the principal attraction for crowds which saw the 1931 national women's swimming championships, but the well balanced team of the Women's Swimming association of New York romped away with the club honors.

By winning three first places and numerous seconds and thirds in the four day meet ending today, the New York mermaids carried off high honors with a total of 39 points. Thanks to Miss Madison's winning ways, the Washington Athletic club of Seattle finished second, with 27, with the Los Angeles Athletic club in third place with 15.

Fails to Tie Records.

Although she came east with a reputation of having cracked the existing records almost every time she entered the water for the last year, Miss Madison failed even to equal the established marks in any of the three events she won here. She captured the 100 yard, 220 yard, and 500 yard free style championships, but her closest approach to a record was in the 220, where she was a full second behind her own world mark.

The Seattle star climaxed her eastern invasion by winning the 500 yard event today, beating her closest rival, Lenore Kight of Homestead, Pa., by more than 20 yards. She led from the start and was never pressed.

Loses in Back Stroke.

Her only defeat of the tournament came in today's opening event, where she could place no better than third in the hundred yard back stroke. It was the first time she had entered a back stroke event in a national meet.

The race was won by Eleanor Holm of New York, who beat out Joan McSheehy of Worcester, Mass., by six inches in a driving finish.

Berg-Canzoneri Bout at Stadium Tops Week's Card

WEDNESDAY—At Cleveland, Bushy Graham, Utica, N. Y., vs. Johnny Datto, Cleveland, featherweights, 6. At Akron, O., K. O. Christner, Akron, vs. Frankie Wine, Montana, heavyweights, 10.

Joe Prelli, Mount Carmel High School Coach, Dies

Joe Prelli, 27 years old, Notre Dame football half back in 1925 and 1927 and coach at Mount Carmel High school, died Saturday night after a brief illness of influenza. Six members of his high school squad will act as pallbearers at the funeral at 10:30 o'clock this morning from St. Clara church. He will be buried in Oakland, Cal., the home of his parents.

They'll Clash Tomorrow at Stadium.

Jim Londos and Kola Kwariani will take short workouts this afternoon and then rest up for their heavyweight wrestling championship battle at the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night. The match will be two falls out of three and headlines a six event bill promoted by Doc Krone, making his first start in the Stadium.

It is a rematch, Kwariani having recently lost to the Greek star after an hour and 24 minutes of bruising action. The ending was so controversial that Kwariani, at the request of supporters both of Londos and Kwariani, is being given a second chance to show which is the better man.

Londos attempted his specialty, an airplane spin, in the first match, and Kwariani was hurled over the ropes to the floor outside the ring. The Russian was badly dazed and offered little resistance after he stumbled back into the ring.

Previous to the over-the-ropes incident, Kwariani had been pinned once.

Jim McMillen, former Illinois football star, is in the semi-windup. He will meet George Hagen, an easterner.

Frank Bronowicz, possessor of eight triumphs here without a reversal, puts his record in danger when he clashes with George Zaharias. If his rival has any weak parts in his body, George finds out about it in a hurry. Zaharias, weighing 235 pounds, has almost 35 pounds edge over the Polish star.

Karl Pojello, Lithuanian of Chicago, will attempt to take a step nearer a match with Londos in his battle with Charley Fox, Cleveland policeman, veteran of several years in the game.

SOIL MOISTURE CHIEF QUESTION IN WHEAT MARTS

European Importers on Buying Side.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Uncertainty as to moisture conditions in the American and Canadian northwest is uppermost in the minds of all grain traders. There has been a long period of extreme bearishness and the situation as regards the crop outlook is causing uneasiness, with less disposition to sell wheat futures owing to the prevailing low prices.

While there are no pronounced holders in the grain markets at present, views of a few of the largest operators are attracting attention. One expresses the belief that unless something happens to the winter and spring wheat crops in the northern hemisphere and in Russia, wheat might sell down to 50c or lower.

Sees Uncertain Situation.

One of the largest operators who has the faculty of getting in and out of large lines on short notice, expressed himself on Saturday by saying "there is little in the wheat market at present. Moisture conditions are uncertain and the price is low." At the same time he called attention to July wheat in Chicago being 6c, while May was 33c. The carrying charge for a year is 18c. "What is there in selling July wheat short under such conditions?"

There is less disposition to sell new crop wheat futures short around the present price level, and an increasing disposition on the part of many traders who have been bearish to buy July and the more deferred deliveries on all sharp breaks. Prices are considered low and crop accidents are in their favor. There is a droughty situation in the American and Canadian northwest which might develop seriously and greatly reduce the acreage. At any rate there is to be a smaller acreage of spring wheat on both sides of the international line.

Views of Exporter.

An exporter, reviewing the wheat situation, said: "Wheat prices have sagged down to a level where foreigners are taking hold more freely. Leading importers in Europe are regarded as shrewd traders. They know how much wheat is being loaded for shipment from all leading exporting countries. They have the details as to whether it has been sold or not, also information as to grades.

"Then the wheat arrives at Liverpool they have bought it largely on their own terms, taking cargoes afloat rather than in store, knowing that extra costs of putting it in store mean much to the shipper, and they take advantage of their position. Having allowed their stocks to run down below the danger line, they have recently become good buyers of wheat from countries offering lowest prices. They realize that they have overplayed their position and will probably continue to buy for some time.

"In the meantime it would not be surprising to see prices in all markets harden somewhat, especially should anything happen to the crop in North America."

Spread Is Narrowed.

Buying of July and selling September wheat in Chicago resulted in a narrowing of the spreead from 2c to 1c, with both months practically even at the close. Spreading and backwardation between Chicago and Winnipeg with large buying to remove bulges in both markets against probably the largest export business of the season in Canadian wheat, all contributed to an absorption of of-

Fed. Reserve Requirements Due for Boost

Washington, D. C., April 19.—(AP)—An increase in reserve requirements of federal reserve member banks as government deposits, resulting from new issues of certificates, are withdrawn from them, was forecast today by the federal reserve board.

The board, in its monthly bulletin, reviewed treasury financing in March which resulted in a working fund for current expenses and advances to veterans on adjusted compensation certificates. The treasury issued $1,500,000,000 in securities, of which $1,000,000,000 represented refunding.

Goes Into Banks.

A large part of the new issues went into the banks, the net increase in the holdings of such securities by member banks in leading cities being $380,000,000 for the two weeks ending March 25. At the same time government deposits of these banks increased about $400,000,000.

The bulletin predicted the increase in reserve requirements as the treasury draws upon them and the deposits pass to private depositors.

A decline of more than $1,000,000,000 in loans and investments of member banks from Oct. 1, 1929, to the end of 1930, the bulletin continued, was not accompanied by a decrease in deposits. This was attributed chiefly to gold imports and to open market purchases by the banks.

Show an Increase.

"Deposits subject to reserve requirements," the bulletin said, "showed an increase of $246,000,000 for the period—$18,000,000 representing an increase in net demand deposits and $228,000,000 an increase of time deposits.

"As against this growth of deposits there was an increase of $55,000,000 in required reserves and, in addition, excess reserves were much larger at the end of the period than at the beginning, so that actual reserve balances held by member banks increased by $153,000,000."

New York, April 19—(AP)—New municipal financing scheduled for award this week amounts to $19,074,284 and represents the needs of 53 communities, compared with actual offerings of $15,027,000 last week. The largest issue scheduled is $7,000,000 Allegheny county, Pa., 4½ per cent road, bridge and public building bonds, to be placed Thursday. On the same day Cambridge, Mass., will place an issue of $1,000,000.

RAILWAYS SEEK FOR METHODS TO BUILD PROFITS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 19.—The problem of increasing the net operating income of the railroads from the low level reached during the last few months is by common agreement one of the most important current questions under discussion.

Although the railroads have been fairly successful during the current depression in reducing expenses in an attempt to bolster their net operating income, wages and taxes, two of the principal items of expenses in railroad operation, remain at their high levels.

In order to bring about any further improvement in net operating income of the railroads, it is contended that either there must be an increase in gross revenues or else a reduction in wages and taxes. Personnel in most instances have been reduced already as much as possible. While there is a probability of some recovery in business during the remainder of the year, in which event there would be in all probability a corresponding increase in railroad transportation, this, it is argued, would probably not be sufficient in view of the current low level to which gross revenues have fallen to restore prosperity to the railroads.

Affect Industrial Welfare.

It is generally recognized that the prosperity of the railroads are essential to the industrial welfare of the United States. They not only constitute the backbone of the national transportation system, but are important purchasers of industrial equipment from other industries. Owing to the large holdings of railroad securities by savings banks, trust companies and insurance companies their bonds alone being currently estimated at $4,8000,000,000, the soundness of these institutions is dependent, in large measure, experts agree, upon the soundness of railroad credit.

Railroad securities outstanding at present are estimated at approximately $25,000,000,000 at par, of which about $14,700,000,000 is bonds and the remainder capital stocks. Of these securities, it is estimated that about $5,500,000,000 is owned by the railroads and the remaining $19,500,000,000 by the public.

Ups and Downs of Traffic.

The total amount of stock in the hands of the public is estimated at slightly less than $7,500,000,000, while the total of bonds held by the public is roughly placed at $12,000,000,000. The stockholders in the class 1 railroads are estimated at more than 800,000, while the bonds amounting to about 60 per cent not held by the saving banks, insurance companies and similar institutions are very widely distributed among the small investor.

From 1890 to 1920 railroad traffic measured in ton and passenger miles increased substantially every decade. From 1890 to 1900 freight increased 86 per cent and passenger traffic by 35 per cent, from 1900 to 1910, freight increased 80 per cent and passenger 102 per cent, while from 1910 to 1920 freight increased 62 per cent and passenger 47 per cent.

Against these sturdy rates of growth, from 1920 to 1930 freight and passenger traffic both decreased, the former more than 6 per cent and the latter 43 per cent. Competition from motor transportation, oil and natural gas pipe lines, inland waterways and high voltage electric transmission lines are agreed to be responsible mainly for the decline in railroad traffic. The extraordinary depression in 1930 was also responsible for part of the decline, nevertheless, the fact remains that this is the first occasion in railroad history in which over any ten year period the volume of freight traffic has actually receded. The decrease in passenger traffic has been evident since 1920. In the nine year period from 1920 to 1929 freight traffic increased less than 9 per cent, while passenger traffic decreased 34 per cent.

The pay roll of the class 1 railroads of the United States in 1929 totaled $2,896,566,000 or about 45 per cent of the gross revenues of $6,279,520,000 received during that year. During that year the railroad employed almost 1,700,000 persons, but owing to the decline in traffic, the number of employés have subsequently been reduced by approximately 400,000.

EDISON COMPANY FIRST QUARTER PROFIT IN GAIN

A moderate decline in gross earnings of the Commonwealth Edison company for the first quarter of this year was more than offset by operating economies, with the result that net income was larger than a year ago. Operating revenues were $21,889,260, compared with $22,822,819 a year ago, a decline of 4.1 per cent. Net income was $5,227,388, equivalent to $3.64 a share on 1,435,192 shares of capital stock outstanding, compared with $5,120,866, or $3.73 a share on 1,372,306 shares, for the first quarter of 1930.

Reports Industry Running Above Levels for Winter

Industry in the United States is currently operating above winter levels, Electrical World reports. March records of electricity consumed in 3,800 manufacturing establishments scattered throughout the country indicate gains in automobile manufacturing, and in those industries contributing largely to building construction—iron and steel, forest products, and the stone, clay and glass group. Approximately balancing these three were recessions, most of them slight, from the February level in other fields, so that the weighted average for all industrial activity changed but slightly.

Where Is End? Traders Ask as Stocks Dip

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 19.—What is this stock market, now on its sixth week of bad behavior, coming to, anyhow?

Is it going through the lows of last December?

And if so, are the few still lower bottoms beyond—in 1929 and the last two hectic months of 1928—to be punctured?

These are questions uppermost in the minds of the average stock trader these days as prices go bumping one new 1931 bottom after another, with no visible signs of a halt. The last week has been about the worst of the six in the matter of sharp declines and has driven many to the charts to find out just how much margin the mill run of stocks have before threatening their minimums for the last three years. The result has been a surprise to many.

Many Above Their Lows.

Leading issues, popularly supposed to be nearing their "worsts," have been found in many instances to be still above the December figures—some of them 10 or 15 points or more to the good. Public Service of New Jersey, public utility group leader, for a conspicuous example, was a good 41 points above its low for the three years at Saturday's closing price.

American Telephone and Telegraph had a margin of 17½ points between it and the dread bottom, People's Gas of Chicago was "safe" by 13¼ points, Coca-Cola stood 17¾ points above the deadline, Eastman Kodak was "safe" by 13⅝ and Standard Gas boasted a margin of 16⅞ points.

Utilities' Showing Best.

Utilities on the average make the best showing on comparison and rails the worst. Many of the carriers, indeed, have already pierced their old lows and seem fated to do even worse—with poor earnings statements for the first quarter now coming in. The oils are full of heartaches and steel stocks are finding fewer friends daily since the bigtime leader of the division, United States Steel, broke through its 1928 bottom last week.

Finds Newspapers Best Suited for Finance Ads

After a survey lasting several months of the advertising medium best suited to financial advertising, officials of the Administrative and Research corporation, sponsors of Corporate Trust Shares, announced their decision not only to continue to place the larger part of their advertising appropriation in newspapers, but to augment the amount of space heretofore used.

BANKERS' CONVENTION TO STUDY PROBLEM OF UNEMPLOYMENT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 19.—The National Association of Mutual Savings Banks will hold its eleventh annual conference in Washington, from May 20 to 22, it was announced today by Henry Bruere, president of the Bowery Savings bank. Delegates representing $9,500,000,000 of deposits and 12,575,000 depositors will attend the sessions. One of the chief topics of discussion, Mr. Bruere said, would be unemployment and its effects on savings and industry.

"Two years ago," Mr. Bruere said, "we had almost convinced ourselves that we had found a solution for the age old problem of maintaining an economic balance which would prevent hard times. Wages were high, production was thriving, and consumption fully kept up with production. But a cog slipped somewhere. It became apparent that the golden age for American wage earners was about to be marred by forced unemployment in every branch of industry. Since then we have had twenty months of a vast industrial readjustment, bringing unemployment and hardship.

"We have seen congress, state, and local governments speed up and extend public works to fill the gaps caused by declining private employment. Upon every hand we may observe earnest efforts to maintain present wage scales and find work for those now idle. The best thought of American business management is to coöperate with labor in establishing and maintaining a stable industrial order.

"The beginnings that have been made by private and public efforts should be extended in every way possible to overcome and prevent future depression, by organization and intelligent planning of production. Business men of all degrees should coöperate through their trade associations to attack the problem of stabilized industry, in order that we may gain a better mastery over the ebb and flow of commerce."

California Oil Output Declines During March

New York, April 19.—Daily average crude oil production in California in March was 527,393 brls, compared with 533,248 brls for February, the American Petroleum Institute reports. Stock figures covering all products held by the principal marketing companies at all points in the Pacific coast territory, including British Columbia, Alaska, and Hawaii, at the end of March totaled 177,611,522 brls, a decrease of 1,328,316 brls during the monhth.

BAD TIMES STIR POLITICAL ILLS, HISTORY SHOWS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 19.—The decline on the stock exchange last year, as we now see it retrospectively, resulted either from things that had definitely happened or whose occurrence was expected or imagined. Last week's decline may perhaps be said to have been caused by the failure of expectations to be fulfilled. Neither today's news nor predictions of tomorrow's seems now to play a part beyond perhaps the deepening of impressions.

The downfall of the Spanish monarchy last week was not an event with direct bearing on American finance or the American markets. The markets were not even agitated by a collapse in "dollar bonds" of Spain, such as occurred on our stock exchange last autumn with the securities of Argentina. There are no Spanish dollar bonds. New York exchange rates on Madrid fell to 10 per cent between Saturday and Tuesday, but Spanish exchange is not a conspicuous corner of the market.

Nevertheless, such unpleasant ideas as already existed in regard to the general situation were possibly emphasized by the incident. Following last year's numerous smaller revolutions, it at least raised the question whether the world is not in a state of political upheaval which threatened indefinite financial unsettlement, and were bound to stand in the way of financial recovery.

Result Not Cause of Slump.

Political disturbance is often enough a powerful influence in upsetting financial confidence, but people are apt to forget the extent to which such disturbances, even of the most formidable character, are a consequence rather than cause of business reaction and hard times. All of the major world-wide panics have been followed by something of the sort.

It is not always remembered that political demonstrations occurred in half a dozen countries in the period of depression two or three years after

Australian Issues Drop; Offerings Decline.

New York, April 19.—(AP)—The bond market wavered back and forth last week and the net changes of domestic issues were narrow and without a definite trend.

Individual issues experienced sharp fluctuations at times, however. Australian obligations dropped sharply on Friday and Saturday on the news of the withdrawal of credit by the Commonwealth bank to the federal government and political upsets. The seriousness of the situation was emphasized by the bank's announcement that the government's overdraft at home and abroad amounted to 250 million dollars. That institution performs many of the functions of a central bank.

Argentine Bonds Weaken.

Australian fiscal affairs have not been to the liking of international bankers for some time. From the standpoint of the bond market some basis of hope appeared on Wednesday in the announcement in London that the British government had agreed to reduce the annual amount of interest due to it from the Australian Commonwealth by $8,000,000 and to extend by two years the period in which the principal would have to be paid. This development was a moderate boon, but the withdrawal of credit preceded a general decline, so that this group closed lower for the week.

The resignation of the Argentine cabinet on Wednesday preceded severe declines in the bonds of that nation. One issue touched a new low and another equaled its old low. Net losses in eleven issues ranged then from 1¼ to 6½ points. Subsequent reports of more stable political conditions were followed by a general recovery, so that the net losses for the week were moderated.

Brazilian obligations weakened at times, but nothing tangible developed to depress them. Other foreign issues moved back and forth and closed with mixed changes.

New Offerings Decline.

Market conditions in domestic corporate bonds may be summarized by the average closing price of thirty representative bonds compiled by the Standard Statistics company, which is 95.4, the equivalent of the 1931 low of 95.4 established on April 10. A large and diversified group of bonds is at or very near the year's low levels, but it is equally true that the high prices of the relatively few bonds of really gilt edge standing reflect the demand for such issues and the easy money market.

Offerings of new issues the last week aggregated $32,401,788, the smallest total with two exceptions this year. The total for the previous week was $296,275,000, the largest weekly total since February, 1927. The sharp slump last week was not surprising. Such a large total of offerings in the previous week requires some time for distribution by dealers.

SALES ACTIVITY, SPRING WEATHER AID LOCAL TRADE

Important merchandising events, including the spring automobile show, and seasonal buying coincident with warmer weather, proved favorable factors in creating unusual interest in Chicago markets during the past week according to the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Wholesale merchandise firms were especially busy. Buying in connection with the special sales event held by the Merchandise mart uncovered heavy demand for all types of yardage goods, with cotton dress materials setting the pace. Silks, draperies and sheeting also were bought freely.

Activity in the wholesale field was reflected in local retail stores, with women shoppers showing particular interest in dress materials and household accessories. Hundreds of merchants were busy arranging window displays of locally manufactured articles in connection with Chicago Products Week, which opened Saturday and will continue until April 25.

Leaders in the automobile field expressed general satisfaction with results obtained at the spring automobile show. Sales activity centered in the lower priced cars, although cars in the medium and higher price ranges came in for considerable attention.

Crucible Steel Operating at 50 Per Cent Capacity

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 19.—The Crucible Steel company is operating at about 50 per cent of capacity and, although this represents an improvement over the final quarter of 1930, it is not sufficient to permit a profit, Horace C. Wilkinson, chairman, told stockholders at the annual meeting in Jersey City recently. First quarter business was at a rate of about half that in the corresponding period of last year, he added.

It is unofficially reported that National Steel corporation first quarter earnings were in excess of the 50 cent quarterly dividend requirement and more than four times the quarter's interest requirements on its present funded indebtedness. Net for the final quarter of 1930 was just over the dividend requirement.

BAD TIMES BRING POLITICAL ILLS, HISTORY SHOWS

Changes Have Never Halted Prosperity Return.

ures the panic of 1907, and were described at the time as indicating that "ancient political landmarks are being ruthlessly removed." The matter of financial crash and trade reaction occurred before the political confusion, not after it; and occurred from causes of a wholly nonpolitical character; also that recovery in finance and trade came in due course, notwithstanding the troubles of politics.

Do Not Prevent Upturn.

On the whole the testimony of history is that great political reversals, even when later perspective shows them to have been in the long run profitable and often salutary, were almost invariably precipitated by the pressure of hard times. But it further testified that the political chances did not prevent a subsequent return of world wide prosperity. Possibly there has never been so complete an overturn of thrones and, recasting of constitutions as in the celebrated "year of revolutions," 1847. Those events were preceded chronologically by the destructive European panic of 1845, which was itself a sequel to the wild railway speculation of the period. The record shows that they, too, were followed towards the end of 1849 by trade revival which contemporary writers described as a new era of prosperity.

Wheat Improves.

With all its repeated changes of direction, the trend of prices on last week's wheat market was upward, and this in immediate sequence to our government's high estimate on the winter crop. All that could clearly be made out of this 7 or 8 cent recovery from recent low prices was that doubts had begun to spread concerning what might presently be shown by Europe's accumulated supplies.

Certainly, some of the week's European dispatches gave a long unfamiliar hint that stocks of wheat have been drawn down rather rapidly, and this attracted attention because the grain trade's entire past history has shown that, at some point in a prolonged and drastic decline of the price, consumption will inevitably be speeded up.

It would be premature to assume that this process has yet attained important magnitude. But a changed position of the kind is apt to be discovered suddenly and unexpectedly. Europe's wheat prices have not been as low as they now are since 1896, the year of "50 cent wheat."

General American Tank Car.

Please send me all available information on General American Tank Car corporation as to nature of business, statistical position, your opinion, etc.—L. K. L.

General American Tank Car corporation was incorporated in 1916. It manufactures and rents refrigerator cars, railroad tank cars, etc. It also manufactures and repairs railway freight equipment.

In recent years the company has been placing more emphasis on the operation of refrigerator cars. In February, 1931, negotiations with Swift & Co., involving the acquisition of 4,000 of its refrigerator, tank, and stock cars were completed. It is expected that the recent expansion program will be continued. Although transportation of gasoline by pipe line may have some effect on the company's earnings, the fact that 60 per cent of the rentals is derived from transportation of food products and that the company is attempting further diversification tends to minimize this threat. The company has about 41,000 cars in operation.

Earnings have shown a steady upward trend since 1921. For 1930 net income was $6,518,161, or $8.02 per share on 811,647 common shares. For 1929 net income was $5,779,741, or $7.36 per share on the 783,772 common shares outstanding at the end of the year. For 1928 net income was $3,910,-313, and for 1927 $2,921,046.

On Dec. 31, 1930, current position was favorable. Current assets were $13,963,123 and current liabilities were $1,317,453. This left a net working capital of $12,610,670, against $11,174,-437 a year before. Cash and marketable securities were $8,684,229.

The common stock has been on an annual dividend basis of $4 a share since Oct. 1, 1927. Stock dividends of 1 per cent quarterly were initiated on April 1, 1929, but were omitted after the January, 1931, payment. The capital stock deserves a fairly good rating.

Interlake Iron.

Will you kindly advise me as to the wisdom of investing $2,000 in the new 5 per cent bonds of Interlake Iron corporation?—A. L. T.

Interlake Iron corporation is the largest producer in the United States of merchant pig iron and commercial iron.

Consolidated net earnings available for interest in 1930 were 3.87 times annual interest requirements on all funded debt to be outstanding on completion of new financing. For the five years to Dec. 31, 1930, such net earnings were 8.25 times this requirement.

The $5,000,000 first mortgage 5s, series B, due May 1, 1951, are suitable for a business man's funds.

At the close distant futures were 2¾@4¼c higher for the week, with prices at practically the highest of the week. July closed at 65¼c, September, 65¼@65⅝c, and December, 69@69¼c. May closed at 53c. Winnipeg May closed at 44⅛@44¼c, up 4¼c, for the week; July, 65⅝@65½c, up 3⅛@4¼c; May showing the strength. Liverpool advanced 4¼ cents.

The visible supply is expected to show another decrease for the week and should continue to decrease for the balance of the season to create a healthy situation.

The farm board is said to have arranged with three elevator concerns to take their cash wheat and give them the May in Chicago, and it is said that all cash interests will be enabled to turn over their cash grain in exchange for May on satisfactory terms. Prices for the week follow:

Good Sales of Cash Oats.

Sales of cash oats to eastern and southern interests the last two weeks have been greatly increased, shipments being made from Chicago and interior points, consumers replenishing stocks. Hedges against cash sales were removed in Chicago which gave the market support and at the same time absorbed liquidating sales of futures by tired holders.

Oat seeding is about completed with a large acreage in most sections. Movement from the country is light and cash oats are at a premium over May in Chicago.

At the close prices were ¼@⅝c higher for the week, May being 30⅝@30¾c, July and September 31½c, and December 33@33¼c. Prices for the week follow:

HOLDS CLEARING OF WORLD DEBTS WILL AID TRADE

Washington, D. C., April 19.—(AP)—Clearing up of the international debts question was said yesterday by Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former German finance minister, to be an important factor in any attempt to restore the normal world level of commodity prices.

As a step in this direction, Dr. Dernburg, in a report made public by the American section of the International Chamber of Commerce, suggested three possible measures:

"Export of credits to parts of the economic world where new investment possibilities exist.

"Decrease in the nominal amount of international debt obligations, hence, as the needs of private business cannot be suppressed without affecting world economy, a reduction of political debts."

"It will probably be found," he said, "that the best solution will be a simultaneous application of these three solutions."
